

Issued Weekly-By Subscription $2.50 per year. Entered as Second Class Matter at the New York Post Office, 1902, by Frank Tousey.

No. 1

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 31, 1902.

Price 5 Cents.

The dog-faced men were coming down the slope like a whirlwind. Jedediah sprang up on the lad der. Pomp followed him. Then Barney sent the airship skyward. Up from the ground clinging to the rope ladder went the three men.

These Books Tell You Everything!

A COMPLETE SET IS A REGULAR ENCYCLOPEDIA!

Each book consists of sixty-four pages, printed on good paper, in clear type and neatly bound in an attractive, illustrated cover. Most of the books are also profusely illustrated, and all of the subjects treated upon are explained in such a simple manner that any child can thoroughly understand them. Look over the list as classified and see if you want to know anything about the subjects mentioned.

THESE BOOKS ARE FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS OR WILL BE SENT BY MAIL TO ANY ADDRESS, FROM THIS OFFICE ON RECEIPT OF PRICE, TEN CENTS EACH, OR ANY THREE BOOKS FOR TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. POSTAGE STAMPS TAKEN THE SAME AS MONEY. Address FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher, 24 Union Square, N.Y.

together with descriptions of game and fish.

No. 26, HOW TO ROW, SAIL AND BUILD A BOAT .- Fully as it will both amuse and instruct. illustrated. Every boy should know how to row and sail a boat. structions on swimming and riding, companion sports to boating.

No. 47. HOW TO BREAK, RIDE AND DRIVE A HORSE .--A complete treatise on the horse. Describing the most useful horses for business, the best horses for the road; also valuable recipes for diseases peculiar to the horse.

No. 48. HOW TO BUILD AND SAIL CANOES .- A handy book for boys, containing full directions for constructing canoes and the most popular manner of sailing them. Fully illustrated. By C. Stansfield Hicks.

HYPNOTISM.

No. 81. HOW TO HYPNOTIZE.—Containing valuable and instructive information regarding the science of hypnotism. Also explaining the most approved methods which are employed by the Leading hypnotists of the world. By Leo Hugo Koch, A.C.S.

FORTUNE TELLING.

No. 1. NAPOLEON'S ORACULUM AND DREAM BOOK .-Containing the great oracle of human destiny; also the true meaning of almost any kind of dreams, together with charms, ceremonies, and curious games of cards. A complete book.

No. 23. HOW TO EXPLAIN DREAMS .- Everybody dreams, from the little child to the aged man and woman. This little book | plete description of the mysteries of Magic and Sleight of Hand, and unlucky days, and "Napoleon's Oraculum," the book of fate.

No. 28. HOW TO TELL FORTUNES .- Everyone is desirous of knowing what his future life will bring forth, whether happiness or misery, wealth or poverty. You can tell by a glance at this little book. Buy one and be convinced. Tell your own fortune. Tell the fortune of your friends.

No. 76. HOW TO TELL FORTUNES BY THE HAND .-Containing rules for telling fortunes by the aid of the lines of the hand, or the secret of palmistry. Also the secret of telling future events by aid of moles, marks, scars, etc. Illustrated. By A. Anderson.

ATHLETIC.

No. 6. HOW TO BECOME AN ATHLETE.—Giving full instruction for the use of dumb bells, Indian clubs, parallel bars, horizontal bars and various other methods of developing a good, scription of nearly every musical instrument used in ancient of healthy muscle; containing over sixty illustrations. Every boy can | modern times. Profusely illustrated. By Algernon S. Fitzgerald, become strong and healthy by following the instructions contained for twenty years bandmaster of the Royal Bengal Marines. in this little book.

Containing over thirty illustrations of guards, blows, and the directions for its use and for painting slides. Handsomely ent positions of a good boxer. Every boy should obtain one of illustrated. By John Allen. these useful and instructive books, as it will teach you how to box without an instructor.

No. 25. HOW TO BECOME A GYMNAST.—Containing full By A. Anderson. Fully illustrated. instructions for all kinds of gymnastic sports and athletic exercises. Embracing thirty-five illustrations. By Professor W. Macdonald.

A handy and useful book. fencing and the use of the broadsword: also instruction in archery, and when to use them; also giving specimen letters for both young Described with twenty-one practical illustrations, giving the best and old. positions in fencing. A complete book.

TRICKS WITH CARDS.

No. 51. HOW TO DO TRICKS WITH CARDS .- Containing explanations of the general principles of sleight-of-hand applicable to card tricks: of card tricks with ordinary cards, and not requiring sleight-of-hand; of tricks involving sleight-of-hand, or the use of specially prepared cards. By Professor Haffner. With illustrations.

bracing all of the latest and most deceptive card tricks, with il- lady in the land should have this book.

lustrations. By A. Anderson.

Containing deceptive Card Tricks as performed by leading conjurors also rules for punctuation and composition; together with specimen and magicians. Arranged for home amusement. Fully illustrated. letters.

MAGIC.

No. 21. HOW TO HUNT AND FISH .- The most complete No. 2. HOW TO DO TRICKS .- The great book of magic and hunting and fishing guide ever published. It contains full in- card tricks, containing full instruction on all the leading card tricks structions about guns, hunting dogs, traps, traps, traps, traps, traps, traps, is the day, also the most popular magical illusions as performed by our leading magicians; every boy should obtain a copy of this book,

No. 22. HOW TO DO SECOND SIGHT!—Heller's second sight Full instructions are given in this little book, together with in- explained by his former assistant, Fred Hunt, Jr.: Explaining how the secret dialogues were carried on between the magician and the boy on the stage; also giving all the codes and signals. The only authentic explanation of second sight.

No. 43. HOW TO BECOME A MAGICIAN.—Containing the grandest assortment of magical, illusions ever placed before the public. Also tricks with cards, incantations, etc.

No. 68. HOW TO DO CHEMICAL TRICKS .- Containing over one hundred highly amusing and instructive tricks with chemicals. By A. Anderson. Handsomely illustrated.

No. 69. HOW TO DO SLEEGHT OF HAND.—Containing over fifty of the latest and best tricks used by magicians. Also containing the secret of second sight. Fully illustrated. By A. Anderson. No. 70. HOW TO MAKE MAGIC TOYS .- Containing tull directions for making Magic Toys and devices of many kinds. By A. Anderson. Fully illustrated.

No. 73. HOW TO DO TRICKS WITH NUMBERS.—Showing many curious tricks with figures and the magic of numbers. By A. Anderson. Fully illustrated.

No. 75. HOW TO BECOME A CONJUROR. — Containing tricks with Dominos, Dice, Cups and Balls, Hats, etc. Embracing thirty-six illustrations. By A. Anderson.

No. 78. HOW TO DO THE BLACK ART.—Containing a comgives the explanation to all kinds of dreams, together with lucky together with many wonderful experiments. By A. Anderson. Illustrated.

MECHANICAL.

No. 29. HOW TO BECOME AN INVENTOR .- Every boy should know how inventions originated. This book explains them all, giving examples in electricity, hydraulics, magnetism, optics, pneumatics, mechanics, etc., etc. The most instructive book published.

No. 56. HOW TO BECOME AN ENGINEER.—Containing full instructions how to proceed in order to become a locomotive engineer; also directions for building a model locomotive; together with a full description of everything an engineer should know.

No. 57. HOW TO MAKE MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.—Full directions how to make a Banjo. Violin, Zither, Æolian Harp, Xylophone and other musical instruments; together with a brief de-

No. 59, HOW TO MAKE A MAGIC LANTERN.—Containing No. 10. HOW TO BOX. The art of self-defense made easy. a description of the lantern, together with its history and invention.

> No. 71, HOW TO DO MECHANICAL TRICKS.—Containing complete instructions for performing over sixty Mechanical Tricks.

> > LETTER WRITING.

No. 11. HOW TO WRITE LOVE-LETTERS .- A most com-No. 34. HOW TO: FENCE.-Containing full instruction for plete little book, containing full directions for writing love-letters.

No. 12. HOW TO WRITE LETTERS TO LADIES.-Giving complete instructions for writing letters to ladies on all subjects; also letters of introduction, notes and requests.

No. 24. HOW TO WRITE LETTERS TO GENTLEMEN .-Containing full directions for writing to gentlemen on all subjects; also giving sample letters for instruction.

No. 53. HOW TO WRITE LETTERS .- A wonderful little book, telling you how to write to your sweetheart, your father, mother, sister, brother, employer: and, in fact, everybody and any-No. 72: HOW TO DO SIXTY TRICKS WITH CARDS .- Em- | body you wish to write to. Every young man and every young

No. 74. HOW TO WRITE LEFTERS CORRECTLY .- Con-No. 77. HOW TO DO FORTY TRICKS WITH CARDS taining full instructions for writing letters on almost any subject;

FRANK READE

WEEKLY MAGAZINE.

CONTAINING STORIES OF ADVENTURES ON LAND, SEA AND IN THE AIR.

Issued Weekly—By Subscription $2.50 per year. Entered as Second Class Matter at New York, N. Y., Post Office.

Entered according to Act of Congress in the year 1902, in the office of the Librarian of Congress,

Washington, D. C., by Frank Tousey, 24 Union Square, New York.

No. 1.

NEW YORK, OCTOBER 31, 1902.

Price 5 Cents.

Frank Reade, Jr.'s, "White Cruiser" of the Clouds

OR,

THE SEARCH FOR THE DOG-FACED MEN.

By "NONAME."

CHAPTER I.

A QUEER VISITOR.

One of the most beautiful little cities in America is "W Readestown. There are located the famous works of Frank out." Reade, Jr., the most noted inventor in the world.

Frank Reade, Jr., is a young, well built and handsome fellow, gifted beyond the ordinary, else he would never have become so famous as the inventor of the wonderful air-ships, electric machines and submarine boats credited to him.

For several generations the Reades had dwelt in Readestown, an ancestor having founded the town.

Upon the banks of the beautiful river which flowed by the town were the electric works of our hero. They covered a large area, and many hundred skilled artisans and machinists were employed.

With this brief introduction of our hero and his home, let us pass quickly on to the incidents of this thrilling narrative, which is very likely what the reader desires most.

Upon a pleasant June morning Frank Reade, Jr., sat in his private room at the works looking over some plans.

Suddenly there came a sharp rap at the door.

Frank jumped up in surprise.

"I wonder who that is?" he exclaimed, sotto voce. "It don't sound like Barney or Pomp, and there are strict orders to allow no one else to come here."

Again came the rap.

"Gosh all hemlock! heow many more times hev I got tew rap? Are yew tew hum, tew-day, Mister Reade?"

The expression of astonishment upon Frank's handsome face was comical.

"Who on earth is that?" he muttered. "I'll soon find out."

With a quick impulse he stepped forward and threw open the door. He started back with an exclamation.

It would have required but a very little stretch of the imagination for Frank to have recognized the caricatured Uncle Sam, employed by cartoonists as a type of the United States Government.

The man who stood before him was a curious looking individual.

In form he was tall and exceedingly angular, with cadaverous features. In dress he had the appearance of having just stepped out of a curio shop with the garments of an ancestor upon his back.

He wore a tall hat after the "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" pattern prevalent about 1840. His coat was a long swallow tail of snuff colored cloth with broad lapels, his waistcoat curiously figured and yielding to a shirt with broad ruffled bosom. His breeches were strapped under the insteps of "It heavy top boots.

He was a correct version of the typical Vermont Yankee of a decade since, with keen twinkling eyes, long chin whiskers and yellow hair.

he could not for a moment speak.

This seemed to tax the visitor's patience.

That's the way we uns does. But yew new fangled critters go with yew." hev queer notions anyway."

"Am I dreaming?" muttered Frank. "Or where did this recovered himself quickly, however, and said: antediluvian specimen come from, anyway?"

But aloud he said curtly:

"How did you get in here?"

Skattles. "Waal, I walked in."

"That is queer!" exclaimed Frank. "I gave Barney and a powerful effort to restrain his mirth. Pomp orders to allow no one to come here."

"Oh, ye did, eh!" exclaimed the strange visitor.

"Didn't you meet a negro or an Irishman at the gate?"

"Waal, now I think of it, I jest 'low I did meet a nigger an' an Irishman out thar, an' they tried a leetle bit of a rastlin' trick with me that didn't work. Oh, I used ter be ther king pin rastler up in Varmount. I'm great on catch holts, Have you any idea what it would cost to take a trip to Africa I am. Wall, I jest picked them infants up an' dumped 'em | in my air-ship?" over ther wall an' shut ther gate on 'em. Oh, they couldn't rastle so well as my ten-year-old boy up in Skattles!"

Frank could not help to smile at the thought of Barney and Pomp, two faithful servitors of his, receiving such treatment as this at the hands of the tall Yankee.

There was something in the Yankee's manner that smiled in a sickly way and got upon his feet. pleased Frank.

He threw the door wide open, and said:

"Well, my friend, I don't allow visitors to this room, but stagers." I'll make an exception in your case. To whom am I indebt- He started for the door, but Frank was suddenly smitten ed for this?"

"Wall, now, I like that!" cried the visitor, extending a sistency. hand which looked as if a blow from it would brain an ox. "Dang me if I ain't a leetle bit teched on ye, friend. Put help you!" it thar! I'm Jedediah Onslow, from Skattles, Varmount."

a chair. What is your business with me?"

"Wall, it's somethin' mighty important, or yer kin bet I "We won't think about that," said Frank, pleasantly, ocrat. I've read about yew an' yer wonderful flyin' ma- Jedediah gave Frank's hand a squeeze that made the chines, and by gosh t'almighty, I thought I'd come down an' young inventor jump. make a proposal to ye."

"Indeed!" said Frank with a broad smile. "What is it?" along with ye--" "Wall, this is how it come about. Ye see, me'n Peleg Shinders hed a big argyment in Trust & Stickem's store Barney and Pomp, my two trusted men, with me." t'other day, up in Skattles. I hed jist been readin' about "Hump," grunted Jedediah. "Thar can't nary one on

Frank was so astonished at this unseemly apparition that | them people out in Central Afriky as they calls dog-faced men. Waal, Peleg he 'lowed 'twas all a lie, an' I stuck tew it that it was true. So fr'm that we made a bet of fifteen "Wall, by jingo!" he exclaimed, testily. "Didn't yew dollars that one or t'other wus wrong, an' I 'greed tew cum ever see a man before? Why don't yew axe me in a leetle here an' lay the matter afore yew fer settlement. Now, if perlite like? If yew was tew come tew Skattles, Varmount, | ye'll take one of your air-ships an' go out thar tew Afriky whar I live, yew'd find the latch string cout all the time. an' settle the question, dang my buskins if I won't agree tew

Frank had a coughing fit behind his handkerchief. He

"Well, Mr. Onslow, don't you think you were a bit rash in making that bet with your neighbor?"

"Eh?" sputtered Jedediah, "I reckoned ye'd go right "How did I git in yer?" exclaimed the pilgrim from quick jist fer patriotism, which they say ye've got a heap of."

"Well, patriotism is a good argument," said Frank, with

"Tell ye what I'll do, boss," said the Yankee, lowering his voice. "I don't keer so much about ther money as I dew about beatin' that cantankerous Peleg. Now, I'll just divide with ye on ther bet."

Frank feigned great dignity.

"Mr. Onslow," he said sternly, "what do you take me for?

"I 'low it would cost pooty well," admitted Jedediah, slowly.

"It will cost thousands of dollars!"

"Sho! yew don't mean it?"

Jédédiah sat like one crushed for a moment. Then he

"Waal, I 'low I better go back to Skattles," he said, lugubriously. "Yew young fry air tew fast for us old with pity for the old fellow in spite of his comical incon-

"Wait a moment, Mr. Onslow," he said. "Perhaps I can

The Yankee turned eagerly.

"I'm glad to meet you, Mr. Onslow!" said Frank. "Take "Yew don't mean it," he gasped. "Not for fifteen dol-. lars, I reckon?"

wudn't be here, fer it's ther fust time in my life that I hev | "but by a queer coincidence you have come here just at the bin more'n ten miles away from Skattles. I 'low the world's right time. I finished my new air-ship, the 'White Cruiser a good sight bigger nor I thought it was." of the Clouds,' yesterday, and have decided to take an ex-"Well, it must seem quite a wonderful thing to you," said ploring trip to Central Africa at once. Now, I'll tell you Frank, with a laugh. "Skattles is not a metropolis, is it!" what I'll do. I will make a search for the dog-faced men "A what? Oh, no yew see we hevn't got tew that sort of while I'm there, and no doubt I shall find them. In the thing yit. But ye mustn't think we uns in Skattles are meantime hold your wager in abeyance, and I will cable you fools. I've took ther Tribune fer nigh on forty years, an' I from Cape Town or some other part at the first opportunity voted fer Horace Greeley because he was a hard-shell Dem- of my success or failure. That is the best I can do for you."

"Yew are a brick!" he cried, "but if yew will take me

"Impossible!" said Frank, decidedly. "I can only take

'em rastle fer a cent. Yew might need a good rastler, Mister Reade!"

Jedediah's manner was so earnest and pleading that Frank felt like yielding.

But it did not seem practicable to take along a passenger who might be only an incumbrance, so he was about to reiterate his refusal when a startling thing happened.

There was a wild yell like an Indian whoop, and the hurrying of feet, and the next moment into the room burst a gracious yo' will be de deaf ob me!" stout, short built darky with a comical looking little Irishman at his elbow.

They made a dash for Jedediah.

"Whurro! let me at the omadhoun phwat flung me over | crestfallen. the fince!" roared Barney. "Av I don't pound the loife out av him thin me name is Dinnis, which it ain't!"

"Golly! jes' yo' lemme lay out dat chap wha' 'sisted mah | bow--" authority!" roared Pomp, belligerently. "I jes' bet he don' try fo' to get by dis chile agin!"

Jedediah humped up his back and cried:

"Look out thar, yew fellers! Don't ye tackle old Var- fected sternness: mount agin or yew'll git broke in tew. Jemima's ghost! Gosh all hemlock! Whoopla! Durn my socks!"

The next moment the three combatants were locked in a tremendous wrestle. It was all so comical that Frank | not to let any wan into yer private office to-day?" Reade, Jr., could not control himself sufficiently to attempt to separate them.

Round and round the room they went in a mad career.

But Barney and Pomp had tackled the wrong individual.

The Vermont Yankee wrestler is noted the world over as chuckled. a famous combination of muscles and cords unequaled in that line on earth.

A Vermonter in a wrestle is ever in his element, and it ole farmer, he am!" may be safely said that Jedediah actually enjoyed doubling his assailants up.

"Hip lock an' shoulder bend!" he cried. "Naow fer a back lock. Gosh all hemlock! Yew chaps kain't rastle." anyhow?" This was very evident.

Jedediah threw Barney like a flash and piled Pomp on top of him.

The two defenders of Frank Reade, Jr.'s private sanctum | nuffins." were not in it, figuratively speaking. In a jiffy Uncle Jedediah had them hors du combat.

CHAPTER II.

EN ROUTE FOR CENTRAL AFRICA.

Frank Reade, Jr.'s, estimate of the Yankee was vastly changed after witnessing the wrestling bout.

In fact, in that moment he saw wherein the credulous, but redoubtable Vermonter would be of great service to him.

"He is a chap of pluck and strength and native wit," he instantly reflected. "I've a conceit that it would not be a bad plan to take him along with me to Central Africa, after all. I could easily make him useful aboard the White Cruiser."

"Marse Frank!" cried Pomp, despairingly, from beneath Barney, where the breath was being crushed out of him; "fo' de Lor's sake will youse pull dat fool l'ishman off me? He kill me, for suah!"

"Shut up, yez black misfit!" roared Barney, angrily. "Av I cud git up, wouldn't I? D'ye s'pose I'm lyin' here av me own choice?"

"Dunno nuffin' 'bout dat," squealed Pomp, "but I 'clar to

At this Jedediah burst into roars of laughter, and let his two victims up.

They scrambled to their feet thoroughly subdued and

"Hev yew fellers had enough yit?" asked the Yankee, coolly. "If yew would like to jest try a new collar an' el-

"Whurroo! don't yez come near me!" cried Barney; in terror. "Ye're the bivil, be jabers!"

Frank recovered from his mirth enough to say with af-

"What do you chaps mean by coming in here and pouncing onto this gentleman in this manner?"

"Shure, sor!" cried Barney, excitedly, "didn't yez tell us

"I did!" replied Frank, "but you were a little over-zealous, that is all. Go back to your post, now, and I will send for you when I want you."

Barney and Pomp sheepishly withdrew, and the Yankee

"I don' see wha' fo' Marse Frank take any stock in dat chap fo'!" cried Pomp, with disgust. "He am jes' common

"Be jabers, but he kin lick the stuffin' out av us, naygur!" cried Barney. "Shure, we're not in it!"

"Huh! I wondah what ebber he want wif Marse Frank,

"Be jabers, I'll bet he's some crank as wants ter go to Afriky with Misther Frank!"

"Marse Frank, neber take him. He don' want no good for

But the two faithful servitors of the great inventor were not always able to successfully diagnose their master's plans.

Left alone with the Yankee, Frank said:

"Friend Onslow, you're anxious to go to Central Africa, are you?"

"Yew bet!" replied the Yankee.

"Well, if you will agree to certain things you shall have your wish."

The Yankee slapped his huge palms together with tremendous force, and cried:

"Gosh durn my old boots! that air jest bully, an' yew kin bet I'll jest agree tew anything yew say. Naow, haow it that?"

"All right!" cried Frank, with a laugh. "It is settled. You shall go to Central Africa with me and I'll match you against the strongest man in that part of the world in a wrestle."

"Yew kin bet yure best caow on thet," cried Jedediah, excitedly. "An' naow tew bizness. When shall we start?"

"Within ten days," replied Frank; "but if you wish I taining to the invention. will show you the craft we shall go in. My new White Cruiser of the Clouds!"

Jedediah was crazy with delight, and Frank led him across a small courtyard to a door in a large high-roofed a thing!" he rejoined. "I reckon ye've got a bigger brain building.

Entering this they came into a long and high-arched room, in the center of which, upon rollers or truck, sat the the yard gate. wonderful air-ship.

Jedediah stood mouth agape for a moment and gazed at athe wonderful sight.

"Waal, I'll be durned!" he gasped. "Yew hev got a want to start promptly." beauty thar an' no mistake. Gosh hanged if I ever seen so pooty a skiff as thet afore in my life!"

The White Cruiser of the Clouds was certainly a beautiful creation.

Her shape was something like that of the new government warship, with a graceful sloping contour of hull and a prodigious length of bow cut sheer.

The material of which the White Cruiser was made was purest aluminum, yet sufficiently annealed to present a surface so hard that the ordinary rifle ball could not penetrate had quarters, and it was connected with the galley and the whole country was soon agog with interest. dynamo rooms.

The deck was narrow and railed in the whole length of the ship. There was a turret forward, in which was a pneumatic electric gun of light material, but capable of throw- reporters got hold of the yarn. ing a deadly bolt of dynamite.

and electric keyboard, and also a powerful searchlight.

Three masts arose from the ship's deck, supporting three powerful rotascopes, any one of which alone was capable of such existed, no one had the least doubt. supporting the ship in the air.

spoon-shaped fans, and also the rudder.

The appointments of the White Cruiser were magnificent. Frank Reade, Jr., had spared no expense in the furnish- in upon Frank, but he paid no heed to them. ings and outfitting.

The cabin was richly draped and furnished, with a dining-table supplied with the choicest of silver and china.

The saloon was magnificent in its splendor. The draperies were of the costliest material, the silks and plushes Gold Coast was reached, and then push into the central part were fine and bric-a-brac was plentiful.

In the hold of the air-ship were rich stores, fit only for A mighty crowd gathered the day of the start. the table of the richest of men. Truly, the White Cruiser was a typical floating palace of the air.

Frank Reade, Jr., had not spared expense nor pains in discussing matters when the starting hour arrived. the fitting up of his air-ship.

Jedediah gazed spellbound about him.

To him it was like being transported to fairy land.

"Waal, I swow!" he muttered, in a dazed way. "If my wife, Jemima, was here naow she'd beg for a dress like that are curtain thar! I reckon she'd go crazy over these 'ere fine things!"

Frank took the pains to show the Yankee everything per-

Down in the dynamo-room Uncle Jed was dumbfounded at the intricacy of the wonderful electrical machinery.

"I'll be dog-gasted if I kin see haow ye ever invented such nor Daniel Webster fer ter do it."

Frank laughed heartily. Then he escorted his visitor to Here he consulted a calendar.

"Let me see, Uncle Jed!" he said. "Supposing you come here next Thursday morning at nine. Be on time, for we "Du yew mean thet?" asked the Yankee, sharply.

"I do."

"Waal, by jingo, I'll be hyar! Shell I bring along a change of clothing?"

"Yes, several," replied Frank, with a laugh. "It will be some time before you get back home again."

The Yankee squeezed Frank's hand almost to a jelly.

"By gosh't almighty, I'll be hyar on time!" he cried. Then as he walked away he muttered repeatedly:

"Great ham bones! What'll Jemima say? I'm off fer Afriky fer sure. Heigho! What will Jemima say, sure?" The news was too good for Uncle Jed to keep.

He had to tell everybody he saw, and the result was the

The enterprising chaps got up a big cartoon and a graphic Amidships was a cabin and stairway leading into the sa- account of Uncle Jed's visit to Frank Reade, Jr. The matloon. Aft was a smaller cabin in which Barney and Pomp ter of Jedediah's bet with Peleg was enlarged upon and the Sporting men made wagers on the question of Jedediah's The turret forward contained also the steering apparatus success; people in general laughed heartily, and all waited with great expectancy for the result.

That Frank Reade, Jr., would find the dog-faced men, if

The young inventor's persistence and his fertile resources At the stern was the propeller, a huge combination of were well known, and failure to him was an unknown quantity.

Floods of letters from cranks all over the country poured

Fresh stores were placed aboard the White Cruiser, a trial trip made to test the machinery, and Thursday morning she was announced as all ready for the start.

It was decided to take a course due eastward until the of Africa.

Barney and Pomp in natty uniforms were on deck, and Frank Reade, Jr., was the center of a knot of interested men

A gong rang in the vard.

Frank stepped upon the gang plank.

"All roight, Misther Frank!" cried Barney.

"Good for you, Barney." cried the young inventor. "But where is Uncle Jed? Has he backed out, I wonder?"

The words were scarcely out of his month, when the yard gate swung open and in dashed a carriage.

In the carriage sat Uncle Jed, a living prototype of Uncle Sam. Upon the rack of the vehicle were piled his trunks.

"Gosh hang it, Mister Reade!" cried the Yankee, leaping upon the air-ship's deck, "I was delayed on account of my best pair of steers gittin' lost in the pastur, an' hed tew hunt spar. 'em up, or Jemima wouldn't hev let me cum away-'thout I did. But I reckon ye wouldn't start 'thout me nohaow!"

aboard, Barney and Pomp!"

The two servitors quickly obeyed. Then they flew to their posts, one in the pilot-house and the other in the engine room.

There was a whirring of the rotascope, and the great airship arose like a monster bird of prey.

Up shot the air-ship.

A salute of guns was fired below, rockets rose in the air, people cheered madly.

Frank and Uncle Jed leaned over the rail waving Americans flags.

Up went the air-ship, and then set out due east.

Soon the mighty panorama of the earth's surface below began to rapidly move. Readestown quickly passed from over the rail. sight and the great journey was begun.

ventures were in store for them.

States were crossed, cities and towns passed over, and then the broad Atlantic came in sight.

nights just now were perfect, the moon lending mellow radiance.

of the Atlantic.

One moonlight night, Frank Reade, Jr., sat by the rail looking downward, when he saw an object upon the surface of the sea.

It required but a momentary glance to decide him to go to the searchlight, and turn its rays down upon that object.

Even at that distance, a thousand feet, Frank saw that it was a human being clinging to a drifting spar.

CHAPTER III.

A TIMELY RESCUE.

Frank could not determine more than this at the mospar.

But he shouted to Barney:

"Stop the propeller, Barney! Let the ship down a little!"

The Celt quickly obeyed.

The ship begun to sink rapidly, and now Frank once more operated the searchlight.

As the air-ship drew nearer the water the young inventor was able to see the castaway more plainly.

It was a man almost devoid of clothing, and who clung with waning strength to the drifting spar.

He tried to wave his arm and shout as the air-ship began to descend. But it nearly resulted in his slipping from the "Gol durn me if it ain't some chap what has got tossed overboard from some ship most likely!" cried Jedediah. "You're just in time," said Frank. "Pile those traps "Gosh t' blazes! air yu goin' tu take him on board, Mister Reade?"

> "Of course I am," replied Frank. "Do you think I could let the poor chap drown?"

"I 'lowed you wouldn't do that !"

"Barney!" cried Frank. "Drop a rope over the rail to the poor chap!"

"All right, sor!" cried the Celt.

Down went the rope and in a few moments it was within the castaway's reach. He seized it and with difficulty wound it around his body.

This done he signaled to those above to pull away.

Barney and Pomp on the rope did so with a will.

Up came the castaway and in a few moments was lifted

He was dripping with sea water and almost devoid of Our friends were off for Central Africa. Thrilling ad- clothing. What was left upon him was tattered and shredded.

He was deadly white and hollow-eyed, but in spite of this it could be seen that he was a fine featured, splendidly The air-ship could sail nights as well as days, and the formed man of possibly thirty years, and to the manor born.

> He staggered a moment as he stood upon the air-ship's deck and gazed about him in a dazed way.

For days the White Cruiser hung over the tossing waters "My God!" he exclaimed, huskily. "What strange thing is this? Is it but another of my fever fancies, or am I in another world?"

> "It is neither, my good sir!" said Frank Reade, Jr., cheerily. "You are on the deck of the White Cruiser and among friends."

The castaway drew a deep breath.

"God be praised if it be true," he said, earnestly, "but what does it mean? This is a ship which floats in the air."

"You are right," replied Frank. "It is an air-ship, and I am Frank Reade, Jr., the captain and owner."

A glad cry broke from the castaway's lips, and a light of comprehension flashed across his face.

"Ah, now I understand!" he cried. "You are Frank Reade, Jr., the inventor of air-ships, whose name I have heard in every part of the world."

"I am," replied Frank.

"Sir, I am glad to meet you. It is a kind Providence Nor whether it was a man or woman clinging to the which brought you this way, just at a time when I believed that my last hope was gone."

"We happened along just in time."

"You did. I am James Trent of Trent Hall, Shropshire, England, and my family are of the oldest in the King's domains. My story is a dark and terrible one, but I must tell it to you. I feel sure that I shall enlist your sympathy and your aid."

"You may be sure that we will give you all the help we can," replied Frank.

"A thousand thanks! You see me now a tattered wretch. Two weeks ago I left New York upon the steamer Trojan for England. I was to go at once to Trent Hall, and there | body in the distinguished passenger. in a few weeks to be married to the girl I love, who is one of the wealthiest heiresses in Great Britain, Lady Evelyn Tremain of Ridge Manor, near Trent Hall.

"With me upon leaving New York was my cousin Royal interest and amusement. Trask. He was to be my best man at the wedding. I had always placed great trust in Royal.

"But before we had been at sea a day I discovered that he of a Yankee." was profoundly jealous of me. He had never seen the girl to whom I was engaged, but he knew that she was an heiress. He is penniless himself, and the thought that I was going to better my position hurt him.

"One curious fact perhaps influenced him in his villainous ! course.

"He was the exact likeness of me in the face, form and manners. If we had been twin brothers the likeness could not have been more striking.

"These thoughts no doubt set Royal to brooding. He was a fellow of violent temper, capricious tastes and hard in conscience.

"One night we sat upon the rear deck. The hour was midnight and a storm was just coming on.

"There in the blackness he leaped upon me, hissing:

"'Ah! cousin of mine, you shall not live to supersede me. Your bride and your fortune shall be mine. From this hour I am James Trent, and you are Royal Trask, and Royal Trask is at the bottom of the sea.'

"With which he lifted me up bodily and threw me over do not espouse the lost causes of their ancestors." the rail. Down into the water I went.

"My shouts were unheard. The steamer went on and I yu will remember, ther Alabama affair-" was left to the mercy of the wind and waves.

some hours when I came across a drifting spar to which I quarrel!" have clung for several days. But God has spared my life and I may yet foil Royal Trask!"

James Trent sank in a chair quite overcome. Reade, Jr., hastened to grasp his hand and cried:

"You shall foil him, and I will help you to do it. Come to the cabin and you shall be cared for!"

But the castaway's head dropped upon his breast.

He had fainted.

Barney and Pomp, however, picked him up in their strong arms and carried him to the cabin.

Here he was given a good bath and stimulants after he came to, and then put to bed.

The next day, after twelve hours of refreshing sleep, he was strong enough to arise and dress himself.

Frank furnished him clothing, and did all in his power to make him comfortable.

The young inventor also put all speed on and sent the banjo. White Cruiser ahead at terrific speed.

"We will get you there in time to foil your rascally cousin, if possible," declared the young inventor.

"Oh, I can never fully repay you!" declared Trent, gratefully. "I owe you my life-all in the world."

"Do not speak of it," replied Frank. "I am a great stickler for justice and right, and I mean to see you through."

Uncle Jedediah was, perhaps, the most interested of any-

As soon as he learned that he was a real live noblemen, he sought every opportunity for conversation with Trent.

To the Englishman the Yankee was the source of much

"He is the most unique specimen I ever saw," he declared to Frank. "On my word, he is the real Englishman's idea

Uncle Jed was consumed with interest in King Edward and his court.

"I reckon ye know ther Prince of Wales, don't yu?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," replied Trent, "he is one of my dearest friends."

"Sho! You don't say. I s'pose he's a leetle better than the ordinary, eh?"

"Well, I don't think that he feels that way. Of course, he is a prince of the blood."

"Yas. Waal, would he speak to a common chap like me, if I was tew address him?"

"I have no doubt of it, if you used politeness and respect."

"Gol durned if I wouldn't like tu shake his paw. But I allus had an ijee that he didn't take much stock in us Yankees on account of ther lickin' we gave you Britishers in the time of ther Revolution."

Trent smiled at this.

"That affair is a buried memory," he said. "Britishers

"Wall, they hadn't forgotten it as late as sixty-one, fer if

"I plead guilty!" laughed Trent. "You are too sharp "Fortunately I was a strong swimmer, and I kept up for for me, Uncle Jed. But I can see no reason why we should

> "Kain't see as we are!" said the old man, whittling away steadily at a stick, "but I'll bet my jack-knife agin yure gold Frank watch, that yu folks never'll see the day when yu kin whip Uncle Sam!"

> > "When would the result of that wager be decided, Uncle Jed?" asked Trent, mischievously. "Not in our day I guess. So you had better keep your jack-knife, and I'll keep my gold watch!"

> > Jedediah saw that he could not possibly pick a quarrel with the good-natured Britisher.

So he gave it up.

But at this moment Barney and Pomp bounced on deck.

Barney wore a grin which expanded his comical mug to the seeming width of a yard, and carried a fiddle under his arm.

Pomp showed a grinning row of ivories, and carried a

"I done fink yo' lak to hear a lily bit ob a seringnade, Marse Trent!" insinuated Pomp, giving the banjo a rattle. "Wha' yo say 'bout it?"

"Delighted," replied the Englishman, eagerly. "Nothing would please me more!"

"Don't yez take no stock in the naygur an' his whangetybang, plantashun mellojies!" cried Barney, contemptuously. | suffice to take the air-ship in its flight across the tight little "Av yez wud only listen to ould Erin's harp that onet-" island.

"Jes' hol' on, I'ish!' expostulated Pomp. "Give de genleman time to say which wan he lak fust, cain't you?"

"A'right, naygur!" cried Barney. "Begorra, I'll begin to scrape me bow thin!"

"Well, I'll tell you how to settle it," cried Trent, fearing a quarrel.

"How am dat, sah?"

"I'll toss up a silver quarter. The man who gets the toss gets the play and the shilling, too. See!"

"A'right, sah !"

Up flipped the silver coin.

It came heads up and this was Barney's choice.

The Celt at once began to fiddle.

There was no kind of a tune that Barney could not elicit | Hall!" from that wonderful violin.

Indeed his reputation was great in Readestown, and there estate. were many good judges of music who acknowledged him a master.

Garry Owen, Sweet Kathleen, and many old Irish ballads followed.

Barney had a fine, rich voice, and he sang in a ravishing way. Trent listened like one enraptured.

> "Oh, tall and stately was her form, An' red brown was her hair, An' rich an' costly were the robes This Irish girl did wear."

Pomp was not to be outdone. His banjo was quickly tuned, and he began to render some plantation melodies and songs which were indescribable.

Uncle Ned, Black Joe, the Old Cabin Home, and many another followed, and many a comical ditty.

> "Oh, I went to bed las' night; I was lyin' half awake, When Satan came to my bedside, Good Lor' how I did shake."

Pomp had twanged his last solo, and vamped his last out for the manor. accompaniment, when Frank Reade, Jr., at the rail gave a loud cry:

"Land ho!"

CHAPTER IV.

THE USURPER FOILED.

In an instant all sprung to their feet. "Land ho!"

The cry meant much to the Englishman, James Trent. It meant that the broad Atlantic was crossed and that England was reached at last.

He was now very near home. But a few hours would

This thought excited the Englishman greatly, and he now paced the air-ship's deck with no other thought.

A few hours later the air-ship passed over a part of Scotland, and was now directly over England.

Frank had located Shropshire on the map, and Trent had indicated the location of Ridge Manor.

It was near dark, however, before the air-ship hovered over Shropshire.

The face of the country below was eagerly scanned by those on board of the air-ship.

Trent himself pointed out the different localities, and finally cried:

"There is Ridge Manor. Just beyond you will see Trent

Ridge Manor was seen to be a very large and beautiful

Its lands were broad and fertile and divided with beautiful hedges of green.

The Hall itself was an old mansion of the Elizabethan pattern. As it was evening lights began to gleam from the windows and through the grounds.

"Something is going on down there!" cried Frank, with conviction.

"It is the wedding!" exclaimed Trent, feverishly. "Can you let me down there at once, Mr. Reade?"

"Certainly!" replied Frank.

The young inventor selected a good place in the grounds to alight.

Then the air-ship descended and rested upon the grounds in the midst of a clump of fancifully trimmed cedars.

Nobody saw its descent for it was too dark.

Frank quickly made arrangements.

The wedding had not yet taken place, for the rumble of carriages could be heard bringing guests.

The plan was for Lord Trent to break in upon the ceremony, confront the false bridegroom, and denounce him.

It would not do to leave the air-ship alone, so Frank commissioned Pomp and Jedediah to remain aboard.

Then with Barney and Lord Trent the young inventor set

In a few moments they had traversed the intervening distance and reached the broad front steps.

The wide door were thrown open and beyond the gay costumes of guests were seen, and music floated out upon the air.

Lord Trent ascended the steps and entered the hall.

Two liveried servants confronted him, but he hurled them aside.

Frank Reade, Jr., and Barney were at his elbow.

The bridal party stood before an altar of flowers. The minister was just ready to read the service.

Straight into the room stalked Lord Trent.

"Hold!" he cried, in a voice of thunder. "I forbid this wedding!"

A sensation was created.

Several ladies fainted, gentlemen gazed in amazement at the speaker, the bride tottered, and the bridegroom turned about and faced the newcomer.

One glance the false bridegroom gave and then he staggered back, gasping:

"My God—it is Trent—back from the sea—back from the dead!"

"Yes, back from the dead, Royal Trask!" cried Trent, firmly. "Back to face you and foil your villainy!"

Lord Tremain, father of the bride, a fine looking old gentlemen, strode forward.

"What is this?" he exclaimed, tensly. "What does this mean?"

"It means, sir, that you are being victimized by an impostor!" cried Lord Trent. "Yonder man is the impostor!"

"But who are you?"

"I am Lord Trent."

The old nobleman glanced from one face to the other.

The look of guilt upon Trask's face convicted him. But yet the father of the bride was puzzled.

"What does this mean?" he cried. "We believe yonder man to be Lord Trent! If he is not then we have been deceived!"

"You have been deceived!" cried Lord Trent, vigorously.
"Yonder impostor is my cousin, whose likeness to me induced him to play a villainous game. In mid-ocean he threw me from the steamer's deck, and then came here and has masqueraded as the real Lord Trent. Evelyn, my love, do you not know me?"

The bride gave one frightened glance at the face of the false bridegroom.

Then with a glad cry she sprang to the arms of the real Lord Trent.

Explanations were quickly made. It was a very romantic affair, but as the villian's plans had been thwarted all were happy.

The treacherous cousin was allowed to escape, with a threat that if seen in the country again he would be delivered up to justice.

Then the wedding went on and the real Lord Trent claimed his bride.

All was happiness and joy.

A merry time was had. Frank Reade, Jr., was introduced to all the party and right royally entertained.

The next day all made a visit of inspection to the air-ship and it was an object of admiration and wonderment to all.

Frank could have spent a season at Ridge Manor and been plore this region."

feted like a prince.

The others readi

But the young inventor was upon a far different mission and soon the air-ship was once more en route to Africa.

"Begorra, I wudn't moind bein' a lord mesilf!" said Barney, smacking his lips. "It's the foinest taste av the crayther I've had fer many a year!"

"Golly!" cried Pomp, rolling up his eyes, "I done tought yo' was def on de English aristocracy, I'ish!"

"Are yez a fool, nayger, that yez didn't remark that I made no specifications?" retorted Barney. "Shure a man kin be a lord widout bein' an Englisher!"

Pomp collapsed and Jedediah discreetly kept silent.

But John Bull's island was soon left far behind and the air-ship passed down the coast of Spain over the rocks of Gibraltar and finally sighted the peak of Teneriffe.

The Canary Islands, Cape Blanco, and Cape Verde were passed.

Then along the Gold Coast of North Guinea and finally Frank passed Fernando Po and sighted Cape Lopez.

From here he had decided to strike into the interior.

Accordingly, the air-ship left the coast and passed over the wild land into the interior of Africa.

It must be remembered that Africa is a mighty continent and the interior or central part of Africa was not to be reached by the air-ship in a day.

The course taken by Frank, he calculated, would bring him in time directly to the source of the Congo River.

From there he intended exploring the country toward Lake Nyanza, the source of the Nile and push down from there into the Zambesi region, coming out eventually at Cape Town.

From there Frank intended sailing home.

In all this region, if no trace was found of the dog-faced men, then it would be reasonable to suppose that they were not in existence.

Jedediah was now vastly interested in the country.

Great tracts of wilderness was passed over, great swamps and marshes peopled with reptile and hippopotami.

Plains wide and level where roamed deer and all manner of wild beasts.

Mountain ranges and lakes and rivers and forests so dense that their foilage could scarcely be penetrated by the sun.

All these things passed like a vast panorama before the gaze of the voyagers. In was indeed all a wonderful sight.

At last after several days' sail over this wonderful country a mighty forest was reached which seemed alive with monkeys and beautifully plumaged birds.

"Let us stop awhile here," said Frank. "I want to explore this region."

The others readily agreed to this.

The air-ship descended and rested upon a slight eminence, from which a good view of the region around could be had.

Then things were made ship shape aboard the White Cruiser.

The cabins were locked, and Barney, who was to remain abourd as guard, took up his station in the turret forward.

"Now, if I give a signal for assistance," said Frank, "raise the ship and come after us."

"All right, sor," said Barney.

The signal was to be a sharp whistle, and all was understood.

Then Frank and Pomp and Jedediah left the air-ship.

They were dressed in light suits of white duck-that is, Frank and Pomp were. The Yankee would not change.

They were armed to the teeth with Winchesters, Derringers and knives, for they knew not what sort of an enemy they might encounter.

The African sun was powerfully hot, and seemed likely to melt our explorers as they crossed the open land.

But they soon reached the shade of the mighty forest, where the sunlight could not very well penetrate.

Here all was a peculiar gloom.

It was a wonderful and most impressive sight.

The trees were monsters in girth and height, and their foliage was so thickly interwoven that daylight could hardly penetrate them.

"Gosh all hemlock!" muttered Jedediah, in amazement; "that's stouter timber nor I ever see on ther Green Mountings in old Varmount. I never seen its ekal afore."

"I think not, Uncle Jed," said Frank, with a laugh; "that is pretty heavy timber. Look at that big rosewood tree. Why, it would be a fortune sawed up and delivered in London!"

The vines, which were thick overhead, were of most beau-

Mosses of wonderful depth grew upon the tree trunks.

The natural treasures spread about were far beyond description, but certainly such as would have delighted the heart of the most enthusiastic botanist.

Trickling streams ran through the forest, and a distant roaring sound told of the cataracts of a river.

The adventurers gazed upon all this with interest.

But if they were bewriched with the flora of this region it. fauna was to afford them even keener wonderment.

Jednaid approached a little coper, and a comple of beauti-

Pemp wanted to try a shot at them, but Frank interposed.

"It would be needless slaughter," he said. "We will wait and have a laint later on."

The tree were filled with chattering monleys.

decodials, parsing under a tree, was gazing at the sight-chain, and one of them grabbed his beaver from his head.

CHAPTER V.

DENIZENS OF THE FOREST.

The act was so quickly and cutely done that the Yankee had not time to clap his hands upon his hat and prevent it.

Such a shrick, of mischief and joy went up from the monkeys as made the woods ring.

Jedediah gave one leap upward and began to storm about like a madman.

The monkeys were now far in the tree tops.

Their actions were comical.

One put the hat upon his head and immediately vanished from sight in it. Then the hat was passed from one to another in a game of catch, which it was bewildering to follow.

Backward and forward through the tree tops went Jede-diah's hat like a football, while the monkeys shrieked and danced with wildest glee.

It was certainly a very funny spectacle.

Frank and Pomp were convulsed with frantic laughter.

As for Jedediah, he was a wild man.

"Gol durn ther sassy picturs!" he roared. "If I git my paws onto 'em I'll rattle their bones. Hi, thar, yer leetle sarpins, throw down that hat!"

But the monkeys did not seem disposed to obey.

"Great ramrods!" blustered the Vermonter. "Jes' hold on till I git thar. I'll give yer suthin' tu larf at!"

But the monkeys kept up the circus with insane glee.

The hat was to them the greatest plaything they had gotten hold of for many a day.

Back and forth it went.

Their sharp little fingers clawing its surface and the contusions it received from contact with the branches was not doing that favorite dicer of the Yankee any good.

In despair Jedediah in turn, begged, threatened and

In value the less job a mark having to a good a time.

Finally, Jedediah got raving mad.

the state of the s

Her was a colonial to the first terms.

Up he went with wenderful agility, and soon had reached the upper branches.

But the monkeys only passed on to the next tree by making a swinging bridge, and were out of Jedediah's way.

All the bathed Yankee could do was to shake his fist at them impatiently.

"By thunder!" he shrieked. "If I cud only git a hip hold on yew chaps, I'd tost yew mighty quick."

Frank now recovered from his fit of mirth.

He began to fear that harm would come to the Yankee by falling from his perch in his great excitement.

So he cried:

"Hold on, Uncle Jed. Come down and I'll get your hat for you."

"Yew will?"

"Yes."

"Gosh durned if I see haow yew kin any better than me!"

"Well, come down and I'll show you."

"All right."

Down slid Jedediah from the tree. Frank picked up his gun and fired it in the air.

The stunning report had just the effect that Frank had calculated it would.

. The monkeys were terrified, and dropped the hat, scrambling for a higher perch.

Frank picked it up and handed it to Jedediah.

The Yankee was dumbfounded.

"Waal, I swow!" he gasped. "I'd never hev thought of that."

"Your hat isn't much hurt," said Frank, "and you're lucky. It's a wonder they hadn't pulled it all to pieces."

"The sassy leetle brats!" exploded Jedediah. "I've a good mind to give them a taste of cold lead."

"Ugh! don't do that!" said Frank. "I would almost as "Golly in shoot a determine human hing. Ah-what is that?" g'rilla!"

From the depths of the forest there came a tremendous

There was a crashing of foliage, a shaking of the ground, and then through the undergrowth the giant form of a wild man, elephant was seen approaching.

He

The monster did not seem to be coming for our adven- on sight.
There, however, so they stied firm.

In the

But he kept on crashing through the forest at right angles their position. He passed on quickly out of sight.

"Golly! I dun findt I wudn't want to git in dat animal's ay!" cried Pemp. "He am jes' a bad one, he am."

"By gesh, I agree with yew!" cried Jedediah. "We will jes' give him a clean pass, I re kon."

Frank, however, was not intimidated with the appearance of the monster, and pressed forward deeper into the forest.

Beautiful, indeed, were the sight- now revealed.

There were well beaten paths which our adventurers followed.

Lovely grottoes among the green foliage were discovered, mossy dells, cooling springs of water and squastered space, enticing enough for the gods.

There was something so grand and cathedral-like beneath the mighty trees that our adventurers were loath to depart from them.

Birds of the rarest plumage were abundant. Monkeys chattered, and all was life and animation.

But suddenly a sharp cry escaped Pomp's lips.

"Fo' de good Lor', Marse Frank, what am dat fing?"

All eyes were turned in the direction indicated and all felt a chill.

Certainly the spectacle was a most gruesome one.

A monster fully six feet in height had stepped from the undergrowth, and stood regarding the travelers with a positively devilish expression in its eyes.

In form it was closely allied to the human being.

Its shoulders were powerful, its arms reaching below its knees with bony fingers. Its legs were short and muscular, and its whole body was covered with hair.

The creature's physiognomy, however, was enough to give one the nightmare.

Description palls in an attempt to portray the expression of that brute face. The eyes were set deep and leering, the forehead contracted, the cheek bones high and angular, and long white tusks hung from the upper jaw.

"A gorilla!" gasped Frank.

Jedediah gazed at the beast in blank amazement.

"Waal, by Jingo!" he cried, "that is the wust lookin' specimen of a man I ever seen, I swar ter gosh if it ain't!"

"Golly! dat ain't a man, sah!" cried Pomp, "dat am a g'rilla!"

"Steady!" cried Frank. "We had better separate.

That chap means to give us trouble."

The gorilla is never known to turn from an attack upon man.

He always regards him as an enemy, and will attack him on sight.

In the present case the gorilla seemed to be considering which one of his foes he would attack first.

His expression of countenance was something fiendish and well calculated to strike terror into the stonest heart.

Frank retreated to the cover of a tree, and Pomp and Jedediah to another.

The gorilla carried in its hand a tremendous club.

It now gave a roar and gnashed its frightful to the "Look out!" cried Frank.

The young inventor knew that it was a critical moment, and great care would need to be exercised.

The beast seemed to have singled out Frank as the object of its attack.

With long strides it started for the young inventor.

Frank waited but a moment.

He knew well what would be the result if the beast reached him.

It would mean death, for the gorilla's strength is greater than that of twenty white men.

Frank raised his Winchester and taking careful aim fired. The gorilla staggered and gave a yell of pain, while a jet of blood spouted from its breast.

Yet the bullet had not reached a vital part, for the monster still came on to the attack.

At that moment Pomp fired.

The ball struck the animal's skull and bounded off harmlessly. The gorilla merely shook its head with a snarl.

Then Jedediah fired.

His bullet entered the animal's side and for a mount staggered it.

The gorilla had now nearly reached Frank Reade, Jr. The young inventor drew back and fired almost point blank.

This time the deadly Winchester proved too much for the most powerful of beasts.

The gorilla staggered and fell in a heap. It was dead in-tintly.

"Gosh all hemlock!" cried Jedediah, rushing out. "I reckon we've cooked his breakfast fer him. Ain't he a buster?"

"You are right, Uncle Jed," cried Frank. "I should hate to meet one of his ilk unarmed in this forest."

"Golly! I jes' reckon dat he wud cat a man right quick! Eh, Marse Frank?"

"I guess so," replied Frank "We wen't make close acquaintare with his hind just the same!"

The gerilla was closely examined.

He was a perfect monster, with muscles of prodigious size and as hard as iron.

(inthinity he would be a had customer to meet after dark. A Smasen could not have matched him.

Frank heaved a sigh.

"I dislike to shoot a gorilla," he said.

· Will ?" Hodeliah.

"They are so like a human being, but they have not the proached mere cautionsly. mind of a human person with which to work out their de-1 - 1

Frank, shivered and turned away.

gerill i.

It would certainly have killed them if they had not.

But new adventures now caused them to quickly forget the incident.

Thus far they had seen nothing of human beings.

Frank did not doubt but that the locality was inhabited by natives. He had kept a lookout for signs of them.

In many cases the natives were friendly. But they were often treacherous and enemies.

He knew that it was in this vicinity that the dog-faced tribe were reputed to live.

Therefore he was anticipating meeting something of the sort at any moment.

Pomp and Jedediah were not.

Consequently they were the most surprised when suddenly from the depths of the forest there came a series of wild shouts, and half naked blacks were seen bounding toward them.

Jedediah turned to flee.

"Gol durn it, boys, thar they come!" he yelled. "1 recken wed internal two cars a quit as ever we can."

But Frank Reade, Jr., gave Pomp stern orders to stand.

CHAPTER VI.

A FRIENDLY TRIBE.

"Don't you move in your tracks, you black rascal!" he cried. "These natives may be friendly."

"Golly sakes, Marse Frank," cried Pomp, with chattering teeth, "what if dey am not?"

"We'll take the chances."

"Den dey kill us two jes' as quick as yo' ebber see."

"Bah! Stand your ground. Leave that to me."

Certainly the appearance of the operating natives was warlike enough.

They swarmed forward like bees, brandishing their javelins and yelling furiously. But this did not alarm Frank.

He was well acquainted with the ways of these natives.

He knew that they always approached in this hostile manner, and the mere fact that they did so was to him clear evidence of their friendship.

If they had mally meant to attack they would have ap-

So the physicy vourg inventor stool his ground,

On came the savages.

Frank mis this risks and dis herged it into the air. The Of corps, there had be noncliernative but to kill the effect was read d. Every negro want out of side in an But in a tew mount has one was seen advancing with his hands raised palm outward.

This was a token of truce and Frank accepted it.

The fellow, a strapping African warrior, beringed and bedecked, made curious signs and then knelt before Frank.

The young inventor gathered from this that the tribe regarded him as their superior, and came to beg friendship.

Of course this was what Frank really wanted.

So he made a few comprehensive signs to the native and sent him back.

This it seemed had a good effect, for in a few moments the entire band of negroes, some fifty in number, came boldly out of cover.

Their chief, a powerfully built fellow, came up to Frank cordially.

He jabbered in an unintelligible way, and then in broken Portuguese, said:

"Mamby Loa, he great chief. Welcome white king to Mamby Land! So good!"

Frank knew the Portuguese language well, and replied:

"I am glad to meet you, King Loa. I will take your hand."

The Mamby chief leaped in the air with keen delight, and almost embraced Frank in his excitement.

"White man he talk Portuguese like Loa. All same. Bery good, me be white king's friend."

"I hope so!" said Frank, eagerly. "If you will stick by me, Loa, I will make you some good presents!"

The Mamby chief lifted his right hand, pointed to the carth, to the sky, and to the four points of the compass.

Then he lay flat upon his belly at Frank's feet, and "Be groveled like a worm. After this puzzling series of antics laugh. he leaped up and placed his javelin at his throat, and said: Pon oath!" . This is the "Good!" replied Frank, with a scale; "but really, sir, your word would have been quite sufficient."

solemnly.

"All right," said Frank, impatiently, "the bargain is made. What is to come next?"

"White king come to Mamby village. Eat meat with Loa. Have dance."

Frank Land to the said the but the said.

Particular contrary massers and a transfer in the object of the contrary of th

However, it was a liquid early pet, so the coung inventor

"The child to Block to the as to go to his vellege with him."

"Golly, Marse Frank," said Pomp, with a duck of hishead, "I'se quite agreeable."

"Yew kin bet it will be heaps of fun," averred Jedediah, with a wink at Pomp. "I s'pose yew kin see yure ancestors here, eh?"

Pomp would have blushed had such a thing been possible. As it was, he shrugged his shoulders with disgust.

"Don' yo' go fo' to tell dis chile dat his ancestors was ebber like dem niggers. No, sah, don' beliebe it."

Frank laughed heartily at this.

"You don't claim kinship with them, eh, Pomp?" "No, sah; I don't."

"Go easy now. Perhaps you may find some comely damsels up in King Loa's town to flirt with."

"No, sah!" protested Pomp, with dignity; "I don' flirt, sah—not a bit ob it, sah!"

"Only on the sly," said the young inventor, with a laugh. "You're a sly rogue, Pomp."

The natives had from the first regarded Pomp with great curiosity.

They saw that he was of the same color as themselves, and took him for one of their race in white men's clothes, which was literally a fact.

Therefore, they felt something of an affiliation, as it were, and during the march to the village one of them ventured to address Pomp.

Of course, the darky didn't understand their lingo.

Therefore, he said, caustically:

"I don' talk in yo' talk, gen'lemens. Don' know nuffin' bout what you'se sayin'."

"Be civil to your relations, Pomp," said Frank, with a laugh.

Pomp, however, would not do this.

"I don' associate and no sich po' trash!" had land, with umbrage. "I goes wif high-toned niggahs, I does."

The murch to King Louis town was two miles through the woods.

Suddenly the ferest began to give way to a lovely little valley right down in the heart of the wild region.

It was a perfect Eden, and as they entered it, Frank claimed:

"I never saw the equal of this before. This must have been the home of Adam and Eve."

"It's a pooty lay of land!" agreed Jedediah, "but, law me! Ye oughter see Seth Hinks' farm up in Skattles. It'll keep ninety head of stock and cut ten ton of hay tew the acre, by gosh!"

Frank subsided with this.

The village of the Mamby tribe came into view.

huts.

As the king's party approached with their distinguished visitors, the inhabitants of the town rushed out in a body. and engaged in wrestling.

Women and children and men, many of them wholly naked, rushed out to meet the party.

Loud shouting and beating of drums followed.

But King Loa issued trumpet orders, and in a jiffy the whole concourse formed a square in the center of the town with the visitors and the king in the center.

Then a number of stout men lifted bodily the roof of a hut upon four upright posts, and placed it over them to shut out the hot rays of the sun.

Mats made of rushes were laid upon the ground.

Upon these the visitors sat.

The king's orders were given quick and sharp and in--tantly obeyed.

A buffalo calf was led forth and killed, and in a jiffy its careass was dexterously dressed and cooking over a bed of 1 1 11 -

King Loa sat upon a pile of mats and gave peremptory orders.

Drink was to the visitors in gourds, and presently men came up tugging heavy tusks of ivory, one of which was laid at the feet of each guest as a gift.

The drink was a peculiar kind of wine manufactured partly from the cocoanut, and was very refreshing.

Pomp took to it kindly, with the result that it made his not so strong!" I tryne more glib than ever.

Harpen of the Special Carle Higgers began to undergo - Eddin chang. The ver por to his thirting ver Samson. 11 - 2 11 1

He has described been public of southing and antimers to some and him account a receive of the Managers constructs

As in the first the same of the state of the same of t a train multiple pate in the partie of the committee

It was evident that King Longer the to do be at the White the coll was constituted in the fire, in the land of and the part of th

The second to the temperate to the temperature of the temperature to the temperature of t

A half de a sen with draws, butle haped, he can to · it out a wild waterly with a chambing out.

The even is become in the collision of the sale.

The state of the second second second to the second

The material with teath fire town and botty turnthe contract of the terms of the second of the 1 1 1 1 1 1

Protection the early miller only and rank the arrangement interpretable to the exercise

It was a large collection of so real hundred strate that that their him has the intensity in the set of the party. This was Jedediah.

Two stalwart negroes, perfect giants in stature, appeared

The exhibition they gave was really fine.

The strength displayed was tremendous and the skill beyond dispute.

Jedediah watched them intently.

The one who came off victorious was so elated, that with the king's permission he challenged any other member of the tribe.

Of course, this did not apply to Jedediah. But when the Yankee saw that the challenge was likely to be unaccepted, he could stand it no longer.

He threw off his coat and cried:

"Gosh I blazes! I'd ruther rastle than eat any time. I say, yew feller, if yer want to hev a go with me, say so!"

Jedediah leaped into the ring.

A sensation was created.

The black wrestler prostrated himself before the king. It was likely that matters would have become complicated had not Frank said in Portuguese to King Loa:

"He means a friendly bout with your subject, King Loa. Just a friendly wrestle."

The king's face changed and he seemed mightily pleased. He bowed and smiled graciously, at the same time saying:

"It shall be as you say, white king. But your friend is Frank smiled.

Jedediah indeed was vastly inferior in size to the black

But the young inventor knew well enough that the Yankee fully made up in skill and trickery what he lacked in weight.

"He is stronger than he looks, King Loa," he replied. /

The black monarch nodded and smiled.

Jedediah stripped to the waist.

The black wrestler looked with disdain at his proportions. The Yankee seemed far outmatched.

"What it yew bet I don't throw him in five minnit. Mister Reade?" cried Jedediah.

"Well, I will wager a supper," replied Frank.

"By a sea I'll i was " sidest the Yanker, "Keep

CHAPLER VII

It streetless to at the different tillings of the terms

They crowded forward eagerly, all on the qui vive.

The two wrestlers took opposite corners of the ring.

Of course, rules did not apply. It was simply a question of the best man wins and "catch holds."

The black regarded his opponent warily a moment.

Jedediah made a feint, and the black deceived by it, made a rush.

Jedediah dodged under his powerful right arm, threw an arm across his back and in a twinkling had a back lock.

The black broke it the next moment, however, being fresh and strong, and caught Jedediah by the hips.

He partly raised the Yankee from the ground, but Jedediah saved himself by a shoulder hold.

The bone's cracked and the sinews straightened in the bodies of both.

It was truly a battle of giants.

Jedediah's skill was marvelous.

In vain the big black tried to crush his lithe antagonist.

Jedediah had a shoulder or hip hold always ready to save himself.

Thus the battle progressed.

. Neither had yet been off their feet.

They broke loose now, and once more retreated to their corners to make a new rush.

The black had by this time come to the conclusion that he was dealing with no ordinary man.

He evidently realized that he had quite a battle before him. His appearance showed this.

He was perspiring like a beaver, and breathing quite heavily.

Jedediah, on the other hand, was as calm and cool as could be imagined.

The Yanker drew a plug of tobacco from his hip pocket; and bit off a productions bunk.

Werking his jaws upon this, he winked at Frank, and said:

"Yure het is lest, Mister Reade. I'm going to throw him this time."

"On my werd, I believe he will," muttered Frank.

This time the black start upon the defensive.

In vain Jel-diah tried to coun him out of his corner,

Then, realizing that he was giving his man too much of a rest. Jeds link made a rush for him.

The darley cleverly picked the Yankee up by the hips, and only a clever shoulder hold saved him.

But Jodedi dies ta vies now, where of the aggressive kind.

He gave his man no rest

Point after feint, triell after triel, was completed, until the big like it was puffing like a strom engine.

His opponent was so slippery that he was utterly unable to do anything with him.

As for Jedediah, he worked with the ardor of one who has the certainty of winning.

Suddenly his opportunity came.

The big black's back weakened. In a moment Jedediah's giant grasp was upon his hips.

The Yankee's powerful hands were like a vise. His own hip caught the black's body, and the next moment, like a falling mountain, down went the black champion.

So heavily was he thrown that he lay for a moment like one stunned.

Such a yell as went up from the spectators.

Jedediah modestly picked up his coat and shirt, and began to don them.

King Loa was intensely excited.

"Your man is a great wrestler," he said to Frank, enthusiastically. "He shall be rewarded!"

"Uncle Jed, I am proud of you!" cried Frank, as Jedediah joined him.

"Waal, I reckon old Varmount is ahead in the rastling line," said Jedediah, modestly.

"You are right," agreed Frank, "if there are any more there like you."

The broiled calf was now brought forward, and the feast began.

After this there was more dancing, and then Frank saw that the sun was getting low.

. "We must return to our ship, King Loa," he said.

"What is that?" asked the King, somewhat puzzled.

"We have a ship which flies in the air like the eagle or the hawk."

The king looked incredulous.

"I have never seen anything of the kind," he said.
"Your people have come to the coast in great winged canoes, but they don't sail in the air"

"But mine does," declared Frank. "If you will return with me, I will show you."

The king seemed pleased.

"Will not the white king bring his winged boat here?" he asked.

"I will," replied Frank, "in the morning."

"It is well," replied King Loa.

Frank had turned to go, when a thought came to him.
Instantly he turned to the native king and asked:

"King Loa, in all this region, have you ever hear! "I a race of men who have faces shaped like a dog's?"

The Ling's face lift up.

"Neutchi Mba," he said.

"What?" asked Frank, in surprise.

"Nautchi Mba, the men with the dog faces. Yes, they are our foes."

King Lasthen proceeded to give Frank valuable information as regarded the dog-faced men.

His description was most graphic and interesting.

According to it the Nautchi Mba or dog-faced men were a frightful race of cannibals and wild men.

They were the deadly enemies of all other tribes, and in their raids carried all before them.

In battle they were fierce and invincible. Of all the savages in Central Africa they were by far the most blood-thirsty.

Frank listened to this description with deepest interest.

According to King Loa's declaration the Mamby village was even now threatened by an attack from the Nautchi Mba.

the wretches would sweep his little band out of existence.

Frank's sympathy was aroused.

"They shall not do it," he declared.

"How can it be helped?" asked Loa.

"I will help it."

The king shook his head sadly. .

"Everything falls before the Nautchi Mba!" he declared; "they are not afraid of the white man's fire-sticks. They cap her nothing and fight lines has with their terms well as weapons!"

Frank and not sop a shiver at this ters description.

The Nautoli. Min would surely to a terrible for to meet.

But he know well that with the help of his che trie

"Four net, King Loa!" he said, reassuringly, "I will help

"If the white king helps Less to punish the Naumin Miss. is well a ver forget it," declared the memoria.

"I will do it." affirmed Frenk. "When do you experi-

"By another rising of the sun."

"I will be on hand with my air-ship before the rising of the sun," said Frank.

T 1 h m } low.

Then Frank turned and said to Pomp and Jebelish:

"Come, let us return to the dir-ship."

King Liu furnish d'a todygmard to escort them best

It did not take very lang to cover the return trail.

Very con the deep forest was left, and the party canse them.

- the theory a country.

H: tie Mur's gand beit them.

Without delay, the three explorers started for the White Cruiser.

knew that it was still where they had left it.

But at this moment a thrilling incident happened.

Distant rifle shots were heard, and then the air-ship was seen to leap into the air.

"Barney has been attacked!" cried Frank, in aların.

"Fo' de Lor's sakes, Marse Frank! Am it de dog-faced men?"

"By gosh, yew have hit it!" roared Jedediah. "Look yonder!"

Sure enough, the dog-faced men had attacked the air-ship.

And now from the cover of a clump of palms a gang of them were seen rushing toward our adventurers.

For any want or in the second term paralysed.

The appearance of the strange barbarians was something frightful.

They were literal giants in frame and statue, with long, black hair, covering head and face and the upper part of the body.

Their heads were of an abnormal size, seeming as large as those of lions, and they carried huge spears and battle clubs.

Frank Reath, Jr., though the horner of his rithe.

"Stand firm, boys!" he cried. "We have got to have a fight with them!"

But there seems I a beginn of the littles

To attempt to the standard with them sometime possible. The fate of our adventurers seemed such that

A hand-te-hand coulder with the Nact hi Mba in such male is as the very was little short of scholdal.

But Frank looked up to see where the air-ship was.

To his joy he saw the White Cruiser descending toward little, and Berney ai the rail letting down a long republisher.

This fell at their feet.

In a moment Frank grasped it, crying:

"Come, boys, get hold here! It is our only hope!"

The dog-faced men were coming down the slope like a whirlwind.

Jerdlah sprang apon the habler. Pemp fellowed him.

Then Bare, sont the air-ship slaward.

Optional mand, linging to the repellubler, went the

A nement later and the deploy being were beneath

The trials began throwing their javelins up after

But they were far beyond range.

"We have nothing to fear," cried Frank. "We are aversion.

Up the rope ladder they climbed then, and a few moments later were aboard the White Cruiser.

Barney welcomed them with joy.

"Shure, sor," he cried, in explaining it to Frank, "I saw the barbarians coming and I up an' give thim a shot, bad cess to thim. Then I was afraid they wud come aboard, so I sint the air-ship up."

"You did just right, Barney," said Frank, approvingly.
"To-morrow we will give them a lesson."

All looked forward to the morrow with thrilled anticipations.

CHAPTER VIII.

BATTLING THE NAUTCHI MBA.

Frank was determined that no harm should come to the Mamby tribe if he could help it.

His liking for King Loa was most profound, and he was determined to defend him against his barbarous foe.

He knew that it was not at all improbable but that the dog-faced men might wipe out the peaceable Mambies entirely.

"I will teach the beasts a lesson they will never forget!"
muttered the young inventor with set lips.

Darkness was now fast coming on.

Frank knew that nothing more could be done that night, so he set an anchor out and allowed the air-ship to remain where it was.

The White Cruiser rocked at her anchor all that night.

The next morning all were up at sunrise.

Pomp prepared an appetizing meal, and then French leaders and the French leaders.

Nothing as to be seen of the Nautoli Wha in the vi-

But as the White Cruiser sailed over the dark forest a startling scene was suddenly revealed.

Across an open space below a perfect bonde of the Naut-

They were proceeding in the direction of the Mamby

Plant, I divert there was no time to low.

It is say to give his triends, to Mannies, n. t. it must Solve of the William Confer to Lord and the line of the

Over the dark were the direction passed

Hower property but definites Frank was sures duto ob- Park.

serve that they did not regard it with the usual fear and aversion.

Instead they brandished their weapons at it in a threatening manner.

Then the young inventor recalled the declaration of King Loa, that the Nautchi Mha were afraid of nothing, either in the flesh or the spirit.

The young inventor compressed his lips in a determined manner.

"We will see," he muttered.

The temptation was too great, and he notified Barney to slow the ship a moment.

Then Frank took one of the explosive projectiles and dropped it over the rail.

It struck fairly in the midst of the clearing

The effect was frightful.

Earth and debris and mangled bodies of the dog-faced men filled the air.

A mound was raised in the clearing composed of these substances.

But even this did not seem to terrify the barbarians.

They yelled all the louder and brandished their weapons with more fierceness than ever.

"Well, I never!" exclaimed Frank, in amazement; "those are the nerviest beings I ever saw."

The Nautchi Mba were certainly wholly without fear.

There was no denying this.

The White Cruiser now kept on for a couple of miles.

It now hung directly over the village of the Mambies.

The conduct of these natives was in strong contrast with that of the dog-faced men.

They prostrated themselves upon the ground in superstitious fear.

They evidently regarded Frank Reade, Jr., as a god, and his air-ship as a cloud upon which he came down to the earth.

The young inventor alighted from the air-ship as soon ait touched the ground.

It required some effort to reassure the natives and overcome their superstitious fear.

But this was finally done, and then Frank induced King Loa to go aboard the White Cruiser.

The air-ship was indeed an object of mighty wonder to the native king.

Frank showed him the electrical machinery and tried to explain it all to him.

But King Louishook his heat and a prod his a rich al

"Me has see it." be easily "Head per think that the while

King Loa was wonderfully taken with the rich appointments of the saloon.

Frank gave him a couch and one of the satin chairs for a throne.

From that moment Frank owned the heart of the Mamby monarch.

The young inventor also distributed simple gifts among the natives in common.

But it was not forgotten that great danger threatened.

Frank told King Loa of the approach of the dog-faced men.

The native king now showed that he-was a man of spirit and pluck.

He called his fighting men together and put them in shape in a masterly fashion.

As nearly as possible, the town was put in a condition suitable for defense.

But Frank Reade, Jr., took a wire, and with Barney and Pomp's aid stretched it from tree to tree around the entire village.

Then he warned the Mambies not to touch it.

It was heavily charged from the dynamos, and thus prepared the oncoming of the Nautchi Mba was awaited.

The Mambies were under arms.

It was determined to make a desperate tight.

The Mambies had been assured of Frank Reade, Jr.'s, assistance, and not being familiar with his resources, their faith that he would keep his promise was of the blind order.

As for the young inventor, he smiled as he thought of the reception he had planned for the rascally Nautchi.

Soon seouts began to come in with reports that the enemy were coming.

Their distant shouts and cries, like the hoarse barking of dogs, could be plainly heard.

To the Mambies it was a terrifying sound.

The Mamby skirmishers were quickly driven in by the approaching for.

It would certainly have been the annihilation of the Manbies that day had it not been for Frank Reade, Jr.

Not one of them would have lived to tell of the fight after-

But the deadly Nautchi Mba had a for to encounter where yours and power was little known to them.

Frank Reade, Jr., Barney and Pomp and Jede hah were. I in the turret forward, keeping a sharp lookout.

They were all armed with Winchesters and had plenty of ammunition.

Suddenly the Mambies were seen to retreat to the cotor of their stochade.

"They are coming!" eried Frank.

This was true.

The woods seemed suddenly full of Nautchi Mba.

They came in a perfect swarm, yelling and howling savagely. They tried to rush upon the Mamby village.

But the first obstacle they encountered was the deadly electric wire, and it was quickly broken. Yet contact with it was costly to them until they learned to avoid it.

Barbarians of a more superstitious and less brutish cast would have been terrified by the unseen foe.

But the Nautchi Mba were so brutish and ignorant as to not even know any fear in any form.

Once started, nothing but death could check them, unless actually cut to pieces and beaten back.

Frank and Barney and Pomp and Jedediah at first made use of their Winchesters.

But these were speedily found to be not sufficient.

The Mambies were valorously defending the opposite side of the village.

Frank cried to Barney and Pomp:

"Bring projectiles! Lively!"

They were brought,

Frank trained the pneumatic gun and thrust a projectile into the breech.

He drew the electric hammer and sent the air chamber forward. There was a dull shock followed by a terrific explosion.

The dynamite projectile had struck in the midst of a hundred of the Nautchi.

In a twinkling they were literally blown to fragments.

A path was mowed through the attacking column.

Again and again the deadly gun was worked.

A literal fortification was being raised around the Mamby village by the explosion.

The Mamby natives themselves were so terrified that they were compelled to retreat to their huts.

This left the White Cruiser to fight the enemy alone.

But it was equal to the occasion.

The Nautchi could not possibly stand before such terrific explosions.

In spite of their bull-dog grit and famous recklessness, they were really obliged to fall back.

Nothing human could hope to stand before those awful projectiles.

A line of heaped up earth fully four feet high extended along one side of the village.

Slowly but persistently the Nautchi were driven back.

When ther did broads up and retreat, theorem, it was an

Venning and description of was over.

It was a mighty victory and a terrible repulse to the Nautchi Mba.

The Mambies ventured to crawl out of their huts when the awful cannonade ceased.

They were the picture of abject fear, and at that moment Frank Reade, Jr., had perfect domain over them.

They could not but regard the young inventor as a being of a higher sphere and allied to the gods.

The scene about the Mamby village was a terrible one to behold.

The ground was heaped with mangled Nautchi Mhas and the trunks and branches of trees riddled by the dynamite.

"Gosh all hemlock!" exclaimed Jedediah, when all was over. "I don't see, Mister Reade, why you couldn't lick Uncle Sam's navy, if yew wuz a mind tew."

"If I could keep out of the way of Uncle Sam's long range guns, I think I could," replied Frank.

The Nautchi Mbas had been ingloriously driven from the field.

They did not return to the attack, and the victory could be safely said to belong to Frank Reade, Jr.

King Loa came forward and prostrated himself at Frank's feet.

"Oh, mighty white king!" he cried, "what have I done that I should have deserved such kind treatment at your hands! You have sared in people!"

"King Loa," replied Frank in Portuguese; "I never yet win-ed to champion the cause of the weak and the right. That was your claim upon me."

CHAPTER IX.

AS TWEOMETRALE BARE BAREOUS.

Alter the repaise of the Nautoni Min, the voyagers of the Fire alpoint the Manda village.

Portettier was a me by thing and reader to entertain fewers were and mines in the world. static or ariset.

The second the self of the contraction of the second of th

Person allillated greatly with his colored by them.

Bata je om dans i det tier pedier drive marniarinter in the mairie, and Jederich was founded wheathing to four, the rivers and a break habe. with the contrast

In a short time they had left the vicinity and the battle inventor was interested in the king's plans for the betterment of his people.

> The young inventor taught the natives many useful arts, made them valuable gifts and encouraged traits of industry.

But one day a sensation was created.

A native came into the village bearing what he regarded as a curious yellow stone.

Its color and beauty had attracted his eye, and he thought of it only as a gift to the great white king.

He cast it Frank's feet, at the same time making a little presentation speech, which was hardly intelligible.

The moment Frank's gaze rested upon it, however, he gave a mighty start.

He picked it up and scanned it eagerly.

There was no deceiving him.

His practiced eye read the truth.

It was gold.

. A huge nugget of it, worth fully two thousand dollars in any civilized country, worth nothing to the untutored native.

Frank was excited.

He called one of the natives, who spoke Portuguese, to act as an interpreter.

Many of the natives had acquired a smattering of this tongue from the legions of Spanish traders who passed among them.

"Where did you get this?" asked Frank, through the interpreter.

"Far north in the mountains," was the reply, "from the back of the elephant."

Frank was puzzled.

"How do you get stones like this from an elephant's back?"

"Ah!" replied the interpreter, "it is a huge stone like this which is shaped like an elephant."

Frank was astounded.

"An elephant of gold," he muttered; "that it too wo derful for belief."

The result was natural.

An expedition was planned to visit the elephant of gold. Frank believed firmly that he was the discoverer of one

The Mambies were only too delighted with the man were the enquelition.

They had no idea of the value of woll.

It was decided to make the trap overland, as it is

There was some little risk mall to a d France. Frank and hing had seem quite channey, and the young that they could protecte him assisted with their Windows

It was not believed that the Nautchi Mba would venture another attack.

It was decided to leave Pomp with the White Cruiser.

This suited the darky well, for he made many cronies among the natives.

Jedediah and Barney, on the other hand, were glad to be the favored companions of Frank on his hunt for gold.

The king, of course, could not leave the village.

But he sent his eldest son, Prince Muda Zan, a bright and intelligent young fellow.

Thus equipped the party, one hundred in number, set out.

The journey was through a forest more dense than any yet seen.

The light of the sun was excluded, and the gloom in places was almost like that of night.

At night they camped in the forest or the jungle, and were besieged by pestiferous flies and insects.

Yet the wonderful sights and discoveries more than repaid Frank for all this discomfort.

Jedediah was hearty and happy, and, with Barney, made things lively.

The Celt had his inevitable fiddle with him, and at night when camp was made he furnished rare enjoyment for the natives, who danced nimbly to his cleverly played jigs.

No incident worthy of note befell the adventurers until they came to a wide river, which was claimed to be a tributary to the Congo.

Here the canoes were launched and preparations made for ferrying across the river.

The banks were thickly grown up with reeds and grasses. Just below there were a series of swift rapids.

But, though the current was swift, the light canoes of he must surely go over it. the Mambies could easily float upon it.

The first canoe load crossed all safely.

In the next was Frank Reade, Jr.

The count inner of his the stern of the craft, and four ! nipulated the paddles.

All told, there were nine in the canoe.

But the which bearing it in the residence of our of the native pair this red the with an eveluntion.

The was a train one agitation of the water not far listant, and then up into view rose the snout and hideous sight. i ... l of a hippopotamus.

The terms of the state of the state of the second and the state of the

- 11

H to the first part in the section.

But as he sighted the rifle he was surprised at the action of the natives.

They ceased rowing and began making frantic motions for him to desist.

The young inventor could not undertsand this.

"What is the matter with you?" he asked, testily.

He ascribed the aversion of the natives to shooting the hippopotamus to cowardice.

"I'shaw!" he exclaimed, "what are you afraid of?"

Then he raised his ritle and fired at the beast.

The bullet struck the monster fairly over the eye.

It, of course, failed to penetrate the skull.

The beast gave a loud roar of pain and anger, and disappeared beneath the surface.

The natives, terrified, began to paddle swiftly for the shore.

They uttered alarmed cries and seemed in desperate fear. Frank was not a little disconcerted at his failure to hit the beast in a vital part.

Now he saw at once the cause of the alarm of the natives. There was an upheaval of the water just behind the canoe. Loud yells of terror escaped the natives as the hippopotamus was seen to arise.

Frank drew aim at the monster and fired.

But the beast's huge jaws struck the canoe. In a moment over it went.

The occupants were struggling in the swift current.

Down toward the caseade they were drawn. Frank Reade, Jr., saw too late what would be the result of his folly.

He was a strong swimmer.

But he could not breast that powerful current.

Down toward the cataract he was swept. He saw that

This seemed certain death.

An awful horror came over the young inventor—a sense of suffocation.

Mast by the in this swift metter? Must this is the ending of his brilliant career?

Truly it was an awful thought.

Billion in film to this of the when he was sweet into the current and the mater and well from sight.

Barney and Jedediah upon the shore were crazy at the

"Och hone, Misther Frank is killed intoirely!" eried Barney, frantically. "Shure, I'll niver see him drown that way!"

The later of the state of the s But the light and a self of the party of the last

The waters had apparently closed over him for good.

It did not seem possible that he could be saved.

The series of cataracts were fearful in height, though not very steep. Yet it did not seem possible that a human being could go over them and survive.

But those on shore were not disposed to remain inactive. Jedediah was the first to recover his senses.

He started along through the reeds upon the river bank. His purpose was to learn, if possible, if Frank had really

"Gosh all hominy!" exclaimed the excited Yankee, as he tore his way through the reeds. "I reckon we'll resky him if it's a possible thing fer us to do!"

"Och hone, I'll niver see Misther Frank again, rist his sowl!" wailed Barney. "Shure it's kilt he is, an' that's the ind av him!"

It required some time for the party to make their way through the reeds to a position below the falls.

But they arrived there finally.

survived the fall over the cataract.

No sign of the young inventor, however, was to be seen. Only the mighty boiling waste of waters and not a human form visible upon them.

It was evident that the canoe had gone to destruction. Not one of them seemed to have survived.

The hippopotamus had certainly had ample revenge for his injury.

Sorrowfully the party wandered up and down the banks king calls for your lives." of the river looking for the bodies of the victims.

These did not at once appear. After a time, however, three of the natives were found half a mile below.

Their bodies were battered fearfully by contact with the jagged pasts.

These were all that were found, however.

Frank Reade, Jr., and the others, it was assumed, had been caught in some eddy, or were sunk at the bottom of some pool.

"Begorra, I'll niver go back without Misther Frank, dead or alive!" declared Barney, rigidly. "Shure I'll die in the attempt to find him."

"Don't be a fule, Irish!" exploded Jedediah. "It well found his body we cudn't take it home, I reckon."

"Be jabers, I'd know whether he's dead or not," retorted B. riev. "An' shure I don't know that now at all!"

The natives were lamenting the loss of their comrades.

There diese in the contract of the tention of the contract of Barrow, objected a goronaky, bowlever, and thus THE PARTY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF THE PARTY.

Si il il mum a mina of land some distance below at king is dead, and we cannot go further." problem to the Americal Vanishing What appeared,

CHAPTER X.

BRAVE LION HUNTERS.

The dog-faced men saw the Mamby warriors at once.

They set up a howl instantly and started to attack them.

Self preservation is ever nature's first law, and in face of this deadly peril Barney for a moment forgot his grief.

"Bejabers, wud yez luk at the blatherskites!" he eried. excitedly. "Shure it'll niver do to lave thim catch us this way!"

"Gol durn me fer a calf!" roared Jedediah, "I'll give one of the pizen sarpints his dose, ye kin bet!"

The Yankee's rifle spoke.

One of the dog-faced men fell.

But this shot only had the effect of increasing the wrath and fury of the other barbarians.

They came on now like a pack of howling wolves.

Muda Zan, the young prince, was the only one of the Mamby natives to hold his senses.

The king's son was really a lad of great pluck.

He brandished his javelin and shouted encouragingly to his men:

"Men of Loa, be brave. You have faced the Nautchi liba before and you can meet them now. They do not outnumber us, and we can meet them. Remember that your

The warriors could not resist this appeal.

They recovered from their panic, and in an orderly manner retreated to the canoe landing.

Here Barney and Jedediah opened fire upon the barbarians.

Volley after volley were given them.

The Nautchi Mba seemed to have acquired a wholesome respect for the deadly and mysterious fire-sticks of the white men.

They were held for a time in check, and sought hiding in the reeds.

Thus the battle was kept up for a long time.

Finally a place was found in a rocky grotto, where our friends were enabled to make a firm stand.

Here they held the Nautchi at bay.

But, now that the fighting had become easier, the Mamby warriors began to complain.

It was not without reason, either.

Prince Muda Zan came to Barney, and said:

"My men want to go buck to their hour The way

"Begorra, I don't want vez to go funder!" cried Brunet, excitedly. "Shure. I only want me dear frien's body to to reach the Mamby village, caught a sudden yellow gleam take back with me to America. Bad cess to this unhowly through the underbrush, just ahead. land!"

"The white king is dead," said the young prince, firmly. of the forest. "His body will never be found."

"It's a loiar yez are!" cried Barney, furiously. "Shure | tail, appeared to view. yez cud foind it av yez wud only look the while."

The Celt's grief and despair was something terrible to depict.

But it seemed to be all of no avail.

The Mambies were firm in their resolution to go back, and no argument would induce them to depart from it.

Jedediah finally joined forces with them and argued:

"Dodgast it, Irish, don't yew see that 'tain't no manner of use tew stay hyar any longer? Mister Reade is gone, an' gol durned if I ain't goin' back! We'll be jinin' him, tew, if we don't git out of hyar pooty quick."

Not until Barney was fully convinced that Frank Reade, Jr., had really gone to his death would he agree to this.

But the pressure was such that he finally yielded.

"Shure the whole counthry will mourn over Misther Frank!" he cried. "It's a foine gintleman he was, to be shure, and niver the loikes av him will I see agin !"

Forty-eight hours after Frank's disappearance in the cataract the exploring party were once more under way.

But this time they journeyed toward home a sad party to be sure.

The Nautchi Mba seemed to have given up the attack, for nothing was seen of them.

Barney was least reconciled of any to the situation.

"Shure Misther Frank can't be dead!" he would assert. "I'll niver belave it until I see his dead body!"

A strong resolve had taken possession of the Celt.

"Shure I'll moighty soon come back!" he declared; "the naygur an' mesilf will come back with the air-ship, an we'll niver leave until we find Misther Frank!"

After this Barney could not push forward fast enough.

Through the wilderness the little party struggled on.

The perils which beset their path were innumerable.

Not only were they harassed by prowling bands of Nautchi, but poisonous reptiles and wild beasts were continually cutting off members of the band announced that they were not twenty miles from King Loa's a heap. village.

This was a joyous announcement, and the depressed -pirit- of all arose.

But almost instantly after an incident occurred which care near costing the lives of several of the party.

Barney, who was in advance and the most cager of any

The next moment a tremendous roar broke the stillness

A monster African lion, with shaggy mane and lashing

The Mambies instantly scattered in terror.

But Barney only came to a halt.

The Celt was not in a frame of mind to brook opposition.

The lion was directly in his path, and this irritated him immensely.

"Bad luck to the beast!" he cried in an exasperated manner. "Wud yez have the civility to get out of me path?"

But the lion did not seem disposed to heed the request.

He held his place, growling savagely.

A prudent man would have at once yielded the royal beast the right of way.

But a lion is said to be to an Irishman what a red rag is to a bull. It may be possible that this was why Barney stood his ground.

However it was, the Celt would not budge.

"Wud yez have the good sinse an' respect to get out av me path?" he cried, slipping a cartridge into the breech of his rifle.

The very audacity of the intrepid Irishman may have been what restrained the lion.

However this was, the king of beasts did not at once make an aggressive move.

"Gosh!" cried Jedediah, "don't yew know enuff tew come in out of the rain, Irish? Yew'll git hurt if yew stay thar!"

"Begorra, I've no toime to waste wid lions an' sich loike!" expostulated Barney. "Get out av me way, ye pizen-looking beast, or I'll blow daylight through ye!"

The lion crouched as if for a spring, and let out a tremendous roar.

The Celt fearlessly raised his rifle and blazed away.

Barney was a good shot, and he had taken care to take good, careful aim at the beast's eye.

As luck had it the shot went true to its mark.

The bullet struck the lion full in the eye.

It plowed its way into the beast's brain, and just as it They kept on heroically, however, until the native guide took the spring line became extinct, and the beast fell in

A great shout vent up from the Man,by warriors.

They all came rushing forward now with great enthusld-III.

To them it was a most mary lon- shot, and Barney was the king of Lunters.

Such provess vas to them a wonder.

Chattering like a gang of monkeys they gathered about the dead body of the lion.

One or two of them pulled out knives and began to flay the animal. Jedediah slapped Barney on the back.

"B'gosh, ye did that handsome, old pard!" he cried, jocularly. "I'll be gol durned if I'd hev faced thet tiger fer any amount o' money."

"Begorra, I don't know what iver made me do it!" ac- and then sank in a quivering mass upon the ground. knowledged Barney. "Shure, it was only a foolish thrick fer any one."

This was certainly a truthful statement.

"But yew got thar!" said Jedediah.

"Be jabers, I always do that same," retorted Barney. "It's an old lion hunter I am, an' no mistake about it!"

The words had hardly left his mouth when a terrible sequel came.

A number of the Mamby natives were busily engaged in lots av thim in your State av Vermont?" skinning the lion.

vicinity.

Suddenly a loud cry of terror went up, the Mambies scattered, a terrific roar awoke the forest echoes, and a long, vellow body came flying through space.

One of the Mamby warriors was crushed by the attacking lion's paw.

Another was torn open by the terrible claws, and a third had the savage beast's jaw fastened in his body.

So sudden had been the attack of the second lion that all were quite unprepared for it.

Two of the Mamby warriors had been instantly killed.

The third of the resend.

The average at of the deal lion stood in the center of the great his dead mate's body.

In his partial jaws was the body of the dying Mamby Visit I Incl.

is a terrible picture.

"Hive an' earth!" screamed Barney, "wud yez luk at the dist. !"

The trishman's ritle.

Crack!

The bullet are the line board doubt, but it might have been a paper pellet for all time ellect that it had.

I blien bet out amother terrible mar, and his teach went depths below. citiz ing through the bones of his victim.

It in a man de de diales turn.

The Yullia was no shach with a rift.

At home to list hunted periodic and westcock and The late - bear seeds his a mean lines, of course.

B: Frd histing is the sess of traiting for the esecand an effort to swim. nilli

Jedediah took cool and careful aim for the beast's side, just back of the shoulder.

He hoped to reach the heart, and by this one shot to terminate the animal's existence at once.

The Yankee's scheme proved a good one and successful.

The bullet went true to the mark.

The lion reared upon its hind legs, tried to claw the air

He was dead instantly.

A great cry went up from the Mamby warriors. They rushed forward and tenderly picked up the remains of their dead companions.

It was a victory for Jedediah.

He was now even with Barney.

"Begorra, sor," said the Celt, shaking hands with Uncle Jed, "ye've hunted lions yesilf, I take it. Maybe yez have

"Naow, not quite so bad as thet," protested Jedediah. It had been suspected that the lion's mate was in the "We don't have lions, but I've seen ther time when yew could bag deer an' panther an' bear up in ther old Green Mountings. We air even up, now, Irish!"

> "Begorra, we are!" agreed Barney, "an' I'll threat to whiskey at ther fust tavern we meet!"

FRANK'S ADVENTURES.

The disappearance of Frank Reade, Jr., over the cataract Jof the African river was certainly a terrible in ident, and well warranted the belief of his companions that he had gone to his death.

That he really had not, though, we will quickly show.

Fate had not ordained that our young inventor should be thus so untimely cut off just at the most proper time in his wonderful career.

His life was spared, and by what seemed certainly like a virtual miracle.

There was nothing to prevent his going over the cataract. Over the edge he did go, and down like a shot to the

He struck with mightful force up a the facted relies along the course of the cataract, and was braid and stunned.

Yet as his book was caught and which district into a little ; under the falls, be had sufficient press, e of mi. I to be

Tids doubtless saved his life

It prevented his being further carried down the current.

Moreover, at this juncture his body was caught in a current and swept under the heavy fall of water, and the next frank or moment he was clinging to a rocky ledge directly under the sank down.

He was of Dazed and bewildered he crept upon this, and for a moment lay there.

Presently, however, his senses began to return, and he became cognizant of all about him.

His position was a peculiar one.

The din of the waters, which seemed falling all about him, was terrific.

He was clinging to a narrow ledge of rock.

Before him was the mighty sheet of the cataract. Tons and hundreds of tons of water were falling into the pool under him.

He dared not return to it.

Certain death would seem to be the result.

What was to be done?

Frank turned completely about.

He was given a surprise.

Directly at his back was what seemed like a veritable cave under the waterfall.

It was hollowed out of the solid rock, and looked as if at one time water had gushed through it.

Where it led to Frank could not even guess.

But it seemed to afford a possible avenue of escape.

Therefore, the young inventor took it.

He crept into the cavern, and for some way followed it through a tortuous course.

Water dripped down from the roof above, and the walls showk with the thunder of the cataract.

Frank kept on until the cavern widehed and became drier, and the roar of the vater became less distinct.

A great hope now seized the young inventor.

He beli ved that it was going to be possible for him to make his escape from the place.

Cheered with this reflection, he kept on.

How long he continued his course he could never tell.

It seemed years, and was doubtless a number of hours, when suddenly the cavern began to take on an upward trend.

A few moments later a gleam of daylight showed alrad. Then he crept out actually into the open air and day-light.

He saw that the cavern had certainly been the course of an underground stream, and that at high water it was aption become such at any time, for he came out into the stony ind of a dry river.

The banks of this dry watercourse were lined with tall trees.

Frank crept among them, and finding a soft, mossy spot sank down.

He was quite fatigued and slept soundly.

How long he slept he could not say, but when he awoke all was darkness about him.

He heard rasiling sounds in the bushes, and saw gleaming eyeballs and heard the snap of teeth.

He knew that he had awoke just in time.

A prowling band of wolves had scented him and now surrounded him.

There was no time to lose.

He regained his feet with an effort, and grasping the branch of a tree drew himself up to a position of safety.

Here he remained until the rest of the night wore away.

Frank now keenly regretted that he had not been able to rejoin or signal his companions the day before.

But his exhausted condition had forbade this.

He fell to wondering where they were, and if they had given him up for lost.

What would be his fate should they abandon the quest for him?

In that mighty wilderness without a guide his position would be a desperate one indeed.

There would be scant chance of his ever getting out of the region alive.

All manner of depressing thoughts flashed across Frank's brain.

But pluck was one of his chief characteristics, and he would not abandon it.

With the coming of daylight the walter disappeared.

No other for hing in sight, Frank ventured to descend from the tree.

the at once set out in the direction which he believed would bring him to the river.

At intervals he gave signals with a whistle, with which Barney was well familiar.

But if the signal was heard it was not answered.

For hours Frank struggled on through the wilds.

Once he avoided entilet with a tager. Twise he exact the hyenas and kept on bravely.

But no river came in sight, nor no cheering sound from comrades.

Then the awird realization dawn d upon him. He was lost!

Lest in the African wilds,

A more harrish thing could hardly be conceived. Hundreds of miles of unexplored territory were upon every hand.

Dangers innumerable beset his path.

Certainly he could never hope to evade them all. It was own devices.

a stupendous thing to contemplate. Horror and despair A short we dwelt supreme in the young inventor's breast. with food, be Everywhere he turned--all was the same wilderness.

But the climax came.

Crushing his way through a copse he heard a snarling sound behind him.

Then he felt a giant clutch upon his arm and sharp teeth pierced his shoulder.

He turned to be rewarded with an awful spectacle.

He was in the clutches of half a dozen of the dreaded Nautchi Mba.

Resistance was useless.

Their hideous, animal-like features were contorted with delight and savage exultation.

"My God!" sereamed Frank, in the agony of awful despair. "I am lost!"

But his captors, strangely enough, did not seek to take his life.

Instead, they threw him upon the ground and instantly bound his limbs with bits of vines.

They chattered and barked and howled in their mandlin joy.

Frank saw at once that they were far nearer the beast than the human being.

He was lifted bodily between them and carried away through the forest.

For something like a mile he was carried in this manner.

Then they came to a mighty clearing in the primeval forest, with a floor carpeted with rich mosses.

Here a wonderful scene was revealed.

Houses, or rather huts, made of stone were here in abundance, and Frank saw that this was a Nautchi village.

His captors now set him upon his feet.

There were fully a hundred men and women in the Nautchi village, the latter being dressed in the robes of lion and bear skins.

A great sensation was created by the appearance of the prisoner and his captors.

The Nautchi women's tup a wild, weird kind of song, and danced about the prisoner.

Then a giant-trained, Nautchi, evidently the chief of the tribe, appeared. He was possessed of a head which, with its mass of hair, seemed lion like.

He gave gruff, guttural orders, and Frank was lifted and carried to a small eminence in the center of the clearing.

Here there was a stone house of larger appearance than the others.

In this the young inventor was placed and left to his own devices.

A short while later one of the Nautchi women came in with food, being the milk of goats, nuts and some strips of raw antelope steak.

Frank was hungry enough to eat anything, and he devoured this repast, which at another time would have sickened him.

He felt better after this.

He was, much encouraged at the prospect of being kept a prisoner. It began to look like a chance for life.

He at once began to consider all feasible plans for escape.

But he quickly came to the conclusion that none were within easy reach.

Stalwart Nautchi warriors patroled a beat without the hut.

His appearance would have doubtless resulted in his being brained at once.

So Frank concluded to remain in the hut.

Two days passed thus.

On the third day of his captivity Frank was led from his prison.

In the center of the great clearing he saw that a vast concourse of the dog-faced men were assembled.

They sat dog like upon the ground in a vast semi-circle with a throne of stone in the center of the crescent.

a position in front of the throne.

The young inventor understood at once what all this meant.

He knew that it was a tribunal or court to be held to decide his fate.

The critical time had come.

He would soon know whether life or death was to be his portion.

That it might be death he inferred with a shivering glance at certain ominous preparations visible about.

In one part of the clearing was a square pile of wood, which was, in all appearances, a funeral pyre.

Before the throne there was a bed of clean, white sand, and by it stood two of the attendants upon the king, each with a pointed staff in his hand.

The prisoner was led down before the throne, and then the king addressed him.

But what he said was all Choctaw to Frank.

The young inventor made no reply.

"I do not understand you."

This was equally unintelligible to the king. It was easily proved that they could not converse in this way.

An ingenious method was now resorted to.

The two attendants with their pointed staffs, by direction of the king began to draw quite accurate diagrams in the sand. They accompanied them with signs.

Frank watched them a few moments with interest.

Then he caught the idea.

He took one of the staffs and began making parallel diagrams. Objects were pointed out, a mark made in the shook and the Nautchi gave wild, awful yells of madness. sand to correspond.

In less time than one could possibly imagine, a rude sign alphabet had been formed and conversation in this way opened.

As soon as this was accomplished a question was put to Frank.

The young inventor interpreted it thus:

"You are a great king. We salute you. Will you be one of us? If you will we will spare your life. If not you must die."

Frank made reply:

"I am not of your people. I cannot do that."

But the Nautchi monarch persisted.

"You have the great thunder and lightning in your grasp. You shall teach it to us."

Frank replied:

"I cannot."

The assertion came tersely:

"You shall die!"

Frank saw that the Nautchi king was obdurate, so he Frank's death. continued:

"If you will spare my life and let me return to my people, I will tell you how to hold the thunder and the lightning." The Nautchi king seemed angry.

He rose in a great wrath and seemed about to strike the prisoner.

But he refrained, and once more said:

"The white king cannot go back to his people. risoner, and must stay with us."

To this Frank made no reply.

The king again wrote:

"Why will you die?"

Frank replied:

"Because I know not fear. If you harm me, my people home again and making Peleg Shinders pay his bet." will come with the thunder and lightning and will kill "By gosh, I reckon he'll bet on a sure thing next time!" 1, 4161 .

The effect of this upon the Nautchi king was frightful.

He got up in a towering rage and gave fierce orders to his me h.

They seized Frank like a pupper and threw him face i wnward upon the funeral pyre.

· _an a relling dance around the pyre.

Frank Reade, Jr., experienced an awful, hopeless despair. He realized with horror that his end was at hand. There seemed no power on earth to save him.

But just as it seemed a moral certainty that his fate was sealed, a startling interruption came.

There was a sudden, tremendous explosion, the ground

CHAPITER XIII.

AT CAPE TOWN.

After the scrape with the lions, Barney and Jedediah, with their Mamby companions, experienced no more perils until the village was reached.

A great throng greeted them there.

But there was loud wailing and sorrowful lamentations at the unfortunate result of the trip.

Pomp was nigh crazed with grief at the report that his beloved master had given up his life.

He entered hastily into Barney's proposition to at once set out for the cataract in the hopes of finding some trace of Frank.

This purpose was announced to King Loa.

The native king was also grief stricken at the news of

He offered to send a large force overland, but Barney and Pomp declined.

They took leave of the Mambies with many expressions of regret.

Pomp, particularly, was loath to go.

Indeed, so royal a time had he enjoyed that he actually declared it his purpose to go back and settle down with King Loa in case Frank Reade, Jr., did not turn up alive.

"Ob co'se I nebber leave Marse Frank," declared Pomp, "but fo' de Lor' I dun like dose brack people berry much."

Barney, however, could not think of anything but his master.

Jedediah was considering his chances of ever getting declared Jedediah, with triumph. "I reckon that folks in Skattles won't call Jedediah Onslow a fule no more."

The air-ship was quickly made ready for the trip.

A short while later the White Cruiser was in the air.

Barney held a course due for the river.

He intended to scoar the region. There was a lingering Then dames were applied to the wood and the Nautchi ; hope in his boson that Frank has escaped from the cutaract land the station in the words.

"Ain't goin' to give him up, be jabers," declared Barney, "not till I see his corpse."

Soon the air-ship hovered over the exact spot where the expedition had attempted to cross the river.

But there was no sign visible of a human being.

Barney allowed the air-ship to float over the vicinity.

Pomp was leaning over the rail, looking down. Suddenly as the White Cruiser passed over a large clearing in the forest, a mighty cry escaped the darky.

"Oh, fo' de good Lor'!" he shrieked, "we're gwine found in their efforts to serve him with refreshments. him! Bress de Lor'! Oh, bress de Lor'!"

"What ails yez?" yelled Barney, as he reached his side; "have yez got the jim-jams or a conniption fit?"

"Golly sakes, l'ish, it am Marse Frank, as sure as yo' is bo'n!"

A mighty cry went up from Barney.

"Phwere?" he roared.

"Oh, down yender, an' Lor' sabe us, de dog-faced men hab got him, an' dey's jes' gwine to burn him up alibe!"

"Tare an' 'ounds!" gasped Barney.

The whole scene was there.

the White Cruiser hung not four hundred feet above the We have come a good way with the air-ship, and the strain clearing.

Like a flash Pomp sprang to the wheel and checked the would need repairs before we could reach home." Cruiser, holding her directly over the spot.

Barney had leaped into the cabin, and now reappeared with a dynamite projectile.

Down he hurled it into a group of the Nautchi.

The explosion was a terrific one.

Dead barbarians were thrown into the air and a hole was blown in the ground big enough to sink a house in.

Down met another projectile.

This is a land to the state of the contract of 1.71 (4) 831

The William Crassis as same and described a great bird many other points of interest. C1 1 1 1 1 1

Dean went the air-ship into the clearing.

Pond worked the gun in the turret. She'll aiter shell vas that, his was in the success. iright of - - p

Barra to the real and a sub-

Reingrami a and management ; man

the interest of the state of th

The many the property of the property with who will doubt be live to be the parties. 1-11-0

"Och hone, I'd niver have given yez up, Misther Frank!" cried Barney, hilariously. "They said ye war dead, but I wudn't believe them!" .

"B'gosh, I kin tell yew for sutin, Mister Reade, thet if it hedn't been fer the Irishman yew'd never hev been saved," cried Jedediah.

"I shall not forget the deed, Barney," said Frank. All went on board the air-ship.

Frank was much exhausted, and Barney and Pomp vied

The Nautchi Mba did not return to the attack.

Doubtless it had become finally impressed upon their stupid minds that they were no match for the white men.

Our adventurers did not linger long in the spot.

The White Cruiser was allowed to mount skyward.

After Frank had recovered fully, he stated his plans.

"We have accomplished one object of our mission," he declared, "and that was to establish the existence of the dog-faced men. We have done that much.

"Now, I propose to go south over the Zambesi River and finally to Cape Town. There we will pack the White Just as the Nautchi flung Frank upon the burning pyre | Cruiser in sections and return to San Francisco by steamer. upon the machinery has been very great. I fear that it

"Begorra, anythin' suits me now!" cried Barney.

"Dat am so wif me, too!" said Pomp.

"Gol durn my pictur, I'll be only too glad to git hum!" said Jedediah, with a chuckle. "Won't I hev some fun shuttin' up that sassy Peleg!"

"And fifteen dollars in your inside pocket," laughed Frank.

Everybody roared at this.

The White Cruiser kept to the southward for many days. The wonderful falls of the Zambesi were visited, and

It was expected to reach Cape Town in six days more, and all were looking eagerly forward to the arrival there.

No one could say that the trip had not been a great

South of the Zaniesi thre was a country we mirried in its fertile resources and rich in lumber and minerals.

"I tell you what," said Frank, with conviction, "Africa is the new world. America is not in it, now. She is effete The tribine is the state of the shall see a great country here before many

There are many of our readers who may follow these lines

(Continued on , 19, 28.)

WILD WEST WEEKLY

A MAGAZINE CONTAINING COMPLETE STORIES OF WESTERN LIFE.

DO NOT FAIL TO READ IT.

32 PAGES. PRICE 5 CENTS. 32 PAGES.

EACH NUMBER BOUND IN A. HANDSOME COLORED COVER.

All of these exciting stories are founded on facts. Young Wild West is a hero with whom the author was acquainted. His daring deeds and thrilling adventures have never been surpassed. They form the base of the most dashing stories ever published.

Read the following numbers of this most interesting magazine and be convinced:

No. 1. YOUNG WILD WEST, THE PRINCE OF THE SADDLE, Issued October 24

No. 2. YOUNG WILD WEST'S LUCK; or, Striking It Rich in the Hills, Issued October 31

FOR SALE BY ALL NEWSDEALERS, OR WILL BE SENT TO ANY ADDRESS ON RECEIPT OF PRICE, 5 CENTS PER COPY, BY

FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher,

24 Union Square, New York.

IF YOU WANT ANY BACK NUMBERS

of our Libraries and cannot procure them from newsdealers, they can be obtained from this office direct. Cut out and fill in the following Order Blank and send it to us with the price of the books you want and we will and them to you by return mail.

POSTAGE STAMPS TAKEN THE SAME AS MONEY.

- PLECK AND LUCK, Nos......
- " THE LIBERTY BOYS OF '76, Nos...... "Ten-Cent Hand Books, Nos.....

Notes and the State of the Stat

(Continued from page 26.)

In due time Cape Town was reached.

This was quite a large place with a conglomeration of everything.

Every kind of a nationality was here represented.

The Spaniard, Portuguese, Italian, French, German and Englishman all lived in this African scaport like a happy family in a large menageric.

There were all kinds of dwellings to suit the national tastes of the owners. Chateaux for Frenchmen, alhambras for Portuguese, bungalows for Englishmen, and cabins for Americans.

Our adventurers created a sensation by descending upon Cape Town in the fashion in which they did.

The people flocked in vast numbers to view the wonderful air-ship.

Frank, however, with Barney's and Pomp's assistance, soon had the White Cruiser packed and crated in sections.

A San Francisco steamer, the Monterey, was in the harbor.

Passage was engaged to San Francisco, and the White Cruiser stored aboard.

The sailing time of the Monterey was announced for the following day, and in the meantime our friends thought they would take a look about the town.

Some peculiar incidents were in store for them.

CHAPTER XIII.

WHICH IS THE END.

Almost as soon as the White Cruiser was packed aboard the Monterey, a foreign looking man came up to Frank, and said:

"Senor, I welcome you to Cape Town. I am Gonzales Madrigueza, the Portuguese Mayor. I beg leave to entertain you."

Frank was in the mood for anything, so he accepted the advances of Mayor Gonzales, who was the ruler of the Portuguese colony.

The result was that our voyagers were all cordially in-

Here Senor Gonzales proceeded to do things up in shape. Wine flowed and a beautiful repast was spread.

Until a late hour that night the entertainment extended. All were treated like princes.

But when they arose to have Senor Gonzales remonstrated.

"Not so, seners!" he said. "I beg you as guests until morning."

"We would willingly stay," replied Frank, "but we must not miss that steamer to-morrow."

"Ah, so!" exclaimed the polite host, "when will the steamer sail?"

"At noon, I believe."

"Ah, zat is all right. Make yourself easy, senors. I will have you conveyed to ze wharf to-morrow at noon."

So the night was spent at the palace of Senor Gonzales.

True to his word the Portuguese mayor had a fine team on hand, and the party were taken to the wharf.

But here a stunning surprise was accorded them.

"The Monterey!" exclaimed the sailing agent. "Gentlemen, I am sorry, but at the last moment, owing to a favorable tide, we changed the sailing time. The Monterey went out last night. I tried to find you, but - "This is a fine state of affairs!" cried Frank, furiously. "Why, I am left, and all on account of your stupidity!"

"Really, senor!" expostulated the sailing agent, "I tried to find you-"

"A likely story!" sneered Frank, "as if everybody in town did not know where we were last night!"

The young inventor refused to be pacified.

But there was no seeming way out of the dilemma but to wait and take the next steamer.

This would sail three days later.

The incident spoiled their further stay in Cape Town. When the Altruria, the next steamer, came into port, Frank and his companions immediately went on board.

"Catch me getting left again!" said the young inventor.

The voyage to San Francisco was without thrilling incident.

As soon as he got ashore Frank went at once to the shipping office.

He expected to find the White Cruiser there ready to be mounted, but, to his astonishment, it was not.

"What steamer did you send it by?" asked the freight commissioner.

"By the Monterey!"

The commissioner gave a sharp cry.

"Ah! I am sorry," he said. "Your freight is at the bottom of the sea!!

"What do you mean?" gasped Frank.

"The Monterey burned three days out, with all on board. It is very lucky for you, sir, that you did not ship on the Monterey, or you would not be here now, sir,"

Frank Reade, Jr., was dumbfounded, as were his companions. The White Cruis r was lost, but what a narrow escape for the vayogers. Fate had conspired to save them.

Of, course, Frank regretted the loss of his air-ship, but he said:

"Never mind. . I will supplant it with a new and more wonderful invention."

Back to Readestown the party went.

Their return created a sensation. Everybody was glad became the lion of Skattles. to know that they had returned alive.

Frank, true to his word, went to work upon a new invention.

Barney and Pomp dropped into the old routine of duty around the works.

Jedediah Onslow won his bet with Peleg Shinders, and

And this, dear reader, brings our story to

THE END.

The next number of the "Frank Reade Weekly Magazine" (No. 2), will contain another thrilling story, entitled "FRANK READE, JR.S, ELECTRIC BOAT, THE EXPLORER: OR, TO THE NORTH POLE UNDER THE ICE."

"HAPPY DAYS."

The Best Illustrated Weekly Story Paper Published.

ISSUED EVERY FRIDAY.

"HAPPY DAYS" is a large, 16-page paper, containing Interesting Stories, Sketches, Jokes, Answers to Correspondents, and many other bright features. Its authors have a national reputation, and no amount of money is spared to make "HAPPY DAYS" the best paper published.

OUT TO-DAY!

OUT TO-DAY!

FRESHMAN FRED;

OR,

A Lively First Year at College.

BY C. LITTLE.

Begins in No. 422 of "HAPPY DAYS," Issued October 31st.

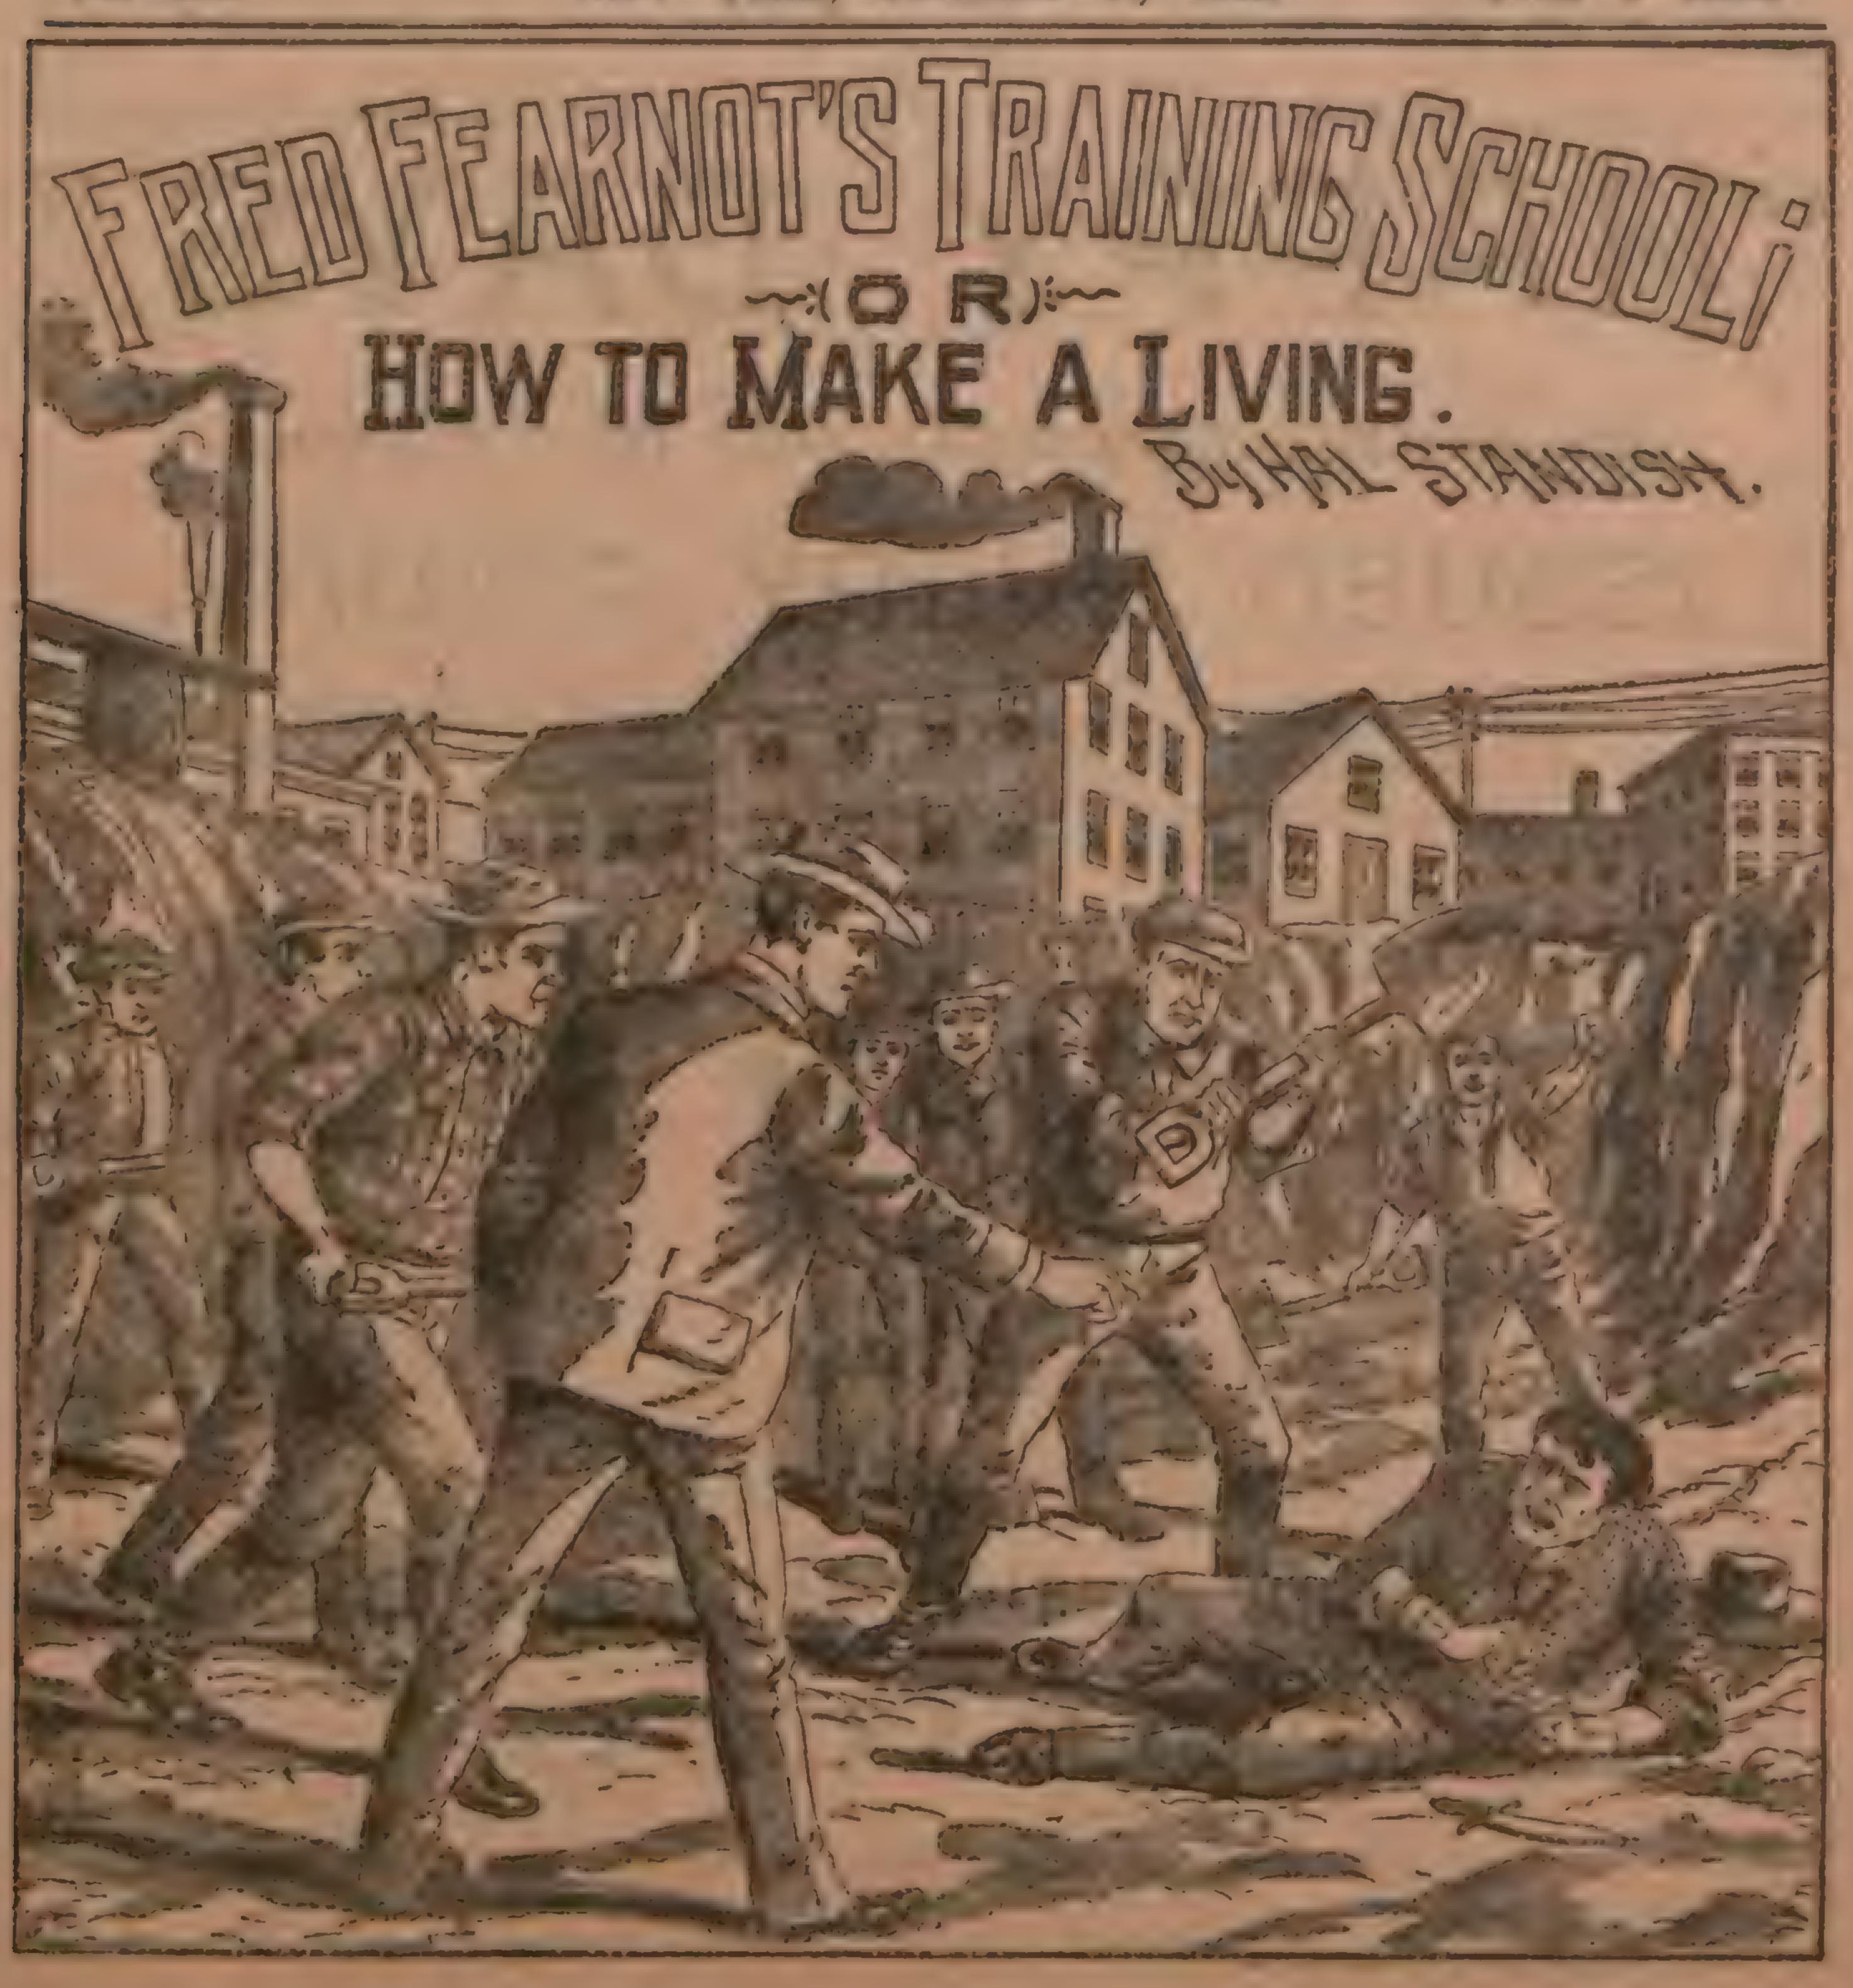

PRICE 5 CENTS.

Send your name and address for a free sample copy. Address

An Interesting Weekly for Young America.

Issued Weekly-By Subscription $2.50 per year. Entered es Second Class Matter at the New York Post Office, December 8, 1898, by Frank Tousey.

YORK, OCTOBER 31, 1902.

VORK AND

The Best Weekly Published.

NUMBERS ARE ALWAYS IN PRINT. ONE AND YOU WILL READ THEM ALL.

LATEST ISSUES:	149 Fred Fearnot and the Kidnappers; or, Trailing a Stolen Child.
88 Fred Fearnot Accused; or, Tracked by a Villain.	150 Fred Fearnot's Quick Work; or, The Hold Up at Eagle Pass. 151 Fred Fearnot at Silver Gulch; or, Defying a Ring.
89 Fred Fearnot's Pluck; or, Winning Against Odds. 90 Fred Fearnot's Deadly Peril; or, His Narrow Escape from Ruin.	152 Fred Fearnot on the Border; or, Punishing the Mexican Horse
21 Fred Fearnot's Wild Ride; or, Saving Dick Duncan's Life.	Stealers. 153 Fred Fearnot's Charmed Life; or, Running the Gauntlet.
92 Fred Fearnot's Long Chase; or, Trailing a Cunning Villain.	154 Fred Fearnot Lost; or, Missing for Thirty Days.
93 Fear Fearnot's Last Shot, and How It Saved a Life. 94 Fred Fearnot's Common Sense; or, The Best Way Out of Trouble.	155 Fred Fearnot's Rescue; or, The Mexican Pocahontas. 156 Fred Fearnot and the "White Caps"; or, A Queer Turning of
95 Fred Fearnot's Great Find; or, Saving Terry Olcott's Fortune.	the Tables.
96 Fred Fearnot and the Sultan; or, Adventures on the Island of Sulu.	157 Fred Fearnot and the Medium; or, Having Fun with the "Spirits."
97 Fred Fearnot's Silvery Tongue: or, Winning an Angry Mob.	158 Fred Fearnot and the "Mean Man"; or. The Worst He Ever
98 Fred Fearnot's Strategy; or, Outwitting a Troublesome Couple. 99 Fred Fear ot's Little Joke; or, Worrying Dick and Terry.	Struck. 159 Fred Fearnot's Gratitude; or, Backing Up a Plucky Boy.
00 Fred Fearnot's Muscle: or, Holding His Own Against Odds.	160 Fred Fearnot Fined; or, The Judge's Mistake.
01 Fred Fearnot on Hand; or, Showing Up at the Right Time. 02 Fred Fearnot's Puzzle; or, Worrying the Bunco Steerers.	161 Fred Fearnot's Comic Opera; or, The Fun that Raised the Funds.
03 Fred Fearnot and Evelyn; or, The inlatuated kival.	162 Fred Fearnot and the Anarchists; or, The Burning of the Red
04 Fred Fearn t's Wager; or, Downing a Brutal Sport. 05 Fred Fearnot at St. Simons; or, The Mystery of a Georgia Island.	Flag.
06 Fred Fearnot Deceived: or, After the Wrong Man.	163 Fred Fearnot's Lecture Tour; or, Going it Alone. 164 Fred Fearnot's "New Wild West"; or, Astonishing the Old East.
07 Fred Fearnot's Charity; or, Teaching Others a Lesson. 08 Fred Fearnot as "The Judge;" or, Heading off the Lynchers.	165 Fred Fearnot in Russia; or, Banished by the Czar.
on Fred arnot and the Clown; or, Saving the Uld Man's Place.	166 Fred Fearnot in Turkey; or, Defying the Sultan, 167 Fred Fearnot in Vienna; or, The Trouble on the Danube.
10 Fred Fearnot's Fine Work; or, Up Against a Crank. 11 Fred Fearnot's Bad Break; or, What Happened to Jones.	168 Fred Fearnot and the Kaiser; or, In the Royal Palace at Berlin.
12 Fred Fearnot's Round-Ho: or, A Lively Time on the Manch.	169 Fred Fearnot in Ireland; or, Watched by the Constabulary. 170 Fred Fearnot Homeward Bound; or, Shadowed by Scotland
13 Fred Fearnot and the Giant; or, A Hot Time in Cheyenne.	Yard. 171 Fred Fearnot's Justice; or, The Champion of the School Marm.
15 Fred Fearnot's Way: or. Doing Up a Sharper.	172 Fred Fearnot and the Gypsies; or, The Mystery of a Stolen
16 Fred Fearnot in a Fix; or, The Blackmailer's Game. 17 Fred Fearnot as a "Broncho Buster;" or, A Great Time in the	173 Fred Fearnot's Silent Hunt; or, Catching the "Green Goods"
Wild Wast	Men.
18 Fred Fearnot and his Mascot; or, Evelyn's Fearless Ride. 19 Fred Fearnot's Strong Arm; or, The Bad Man of Arizona.	174 Fred Fearnot's Big Day; or, Harvard and Yale at New Era. 175 Fred Fearnot and "The Doctor"; or, The Indian Medicine Fasir.
20 "red Fearnot as a "Tenderfoot;" or, Having Fun with the Cow-	176 Fred Fearnot and the Lynchers; or, Saving a Girl Horse Thief.
21 Fred Fearnot Captured; or, In the Hands of His Enemies.	177 Fred Fearnot's Wonderful Feat; or, The Taming of Black Beauty. 178 Fred Fearnot's Great Struggle; or, Downing a Senator.
22 Fred Fearnot and the Banker; or, a Schemer's Trap to Ruin	179 Fred Fearnot's Jubilee; or, New Era's Greatest Day.
23 Fred Fearnot's Great Feat; or, Winning a Fortune on Skates.	180 Fred Fearnot and Samson; or, "Who Runs This Town?" 181 Fred Fearnot and the Rioters; or, Backing Up the Sheriff.
24 Fred Fearnot's Iron V'ill; or, Standing Up for the Right. 125 Fred Fearnot Cornered; or, Evelyn and the Widow.	182 Fred Fearnot and the Stage Robber; or, His Chase for a Stolen Diamond.
126 Fred Fearnot's Daring Scheme; or, Ten Days in an insane Asylum.	183 Fred Fearnot at Cripple Creek; or, The Masked Flends of the
127 Fred Fearnot's Honor; or, Backing Up His Word.	184 Fred Fearnot and the Vigilantes; or, Up Against the Wrone
23 Fred Fe ruot at West Point; or, Having Fun with the Hazers.	Man.
30 Fred Fearnot's Secret S ciety; or, The Knights of the Black Ring. 31 Fred Fearnot and the Gambler; or, The Trouble on the Lake	186 Fred Fearnot in Arkansas; or. The Queerest of All Adventures.
Front. 132 Fred Fearnot's Challenge; or, King of the Diamond Field.	187 Fred Fearnot in Montana; or, The Dispute at Rocky Hill.
22 Fred Fearnot's Great Game: or, The Hard Work That Wen.	188 Fred Fearnot and the Mayor; or, The Trouble at Snapping Shoals. 189 Fred Fearnot's Big Hunt; or, Camping on the Columbia River.
34 Fred Fearnot in Atlanta; or, The Black Flend of Darktown.	190 Fred Fearnot's Hard Experience; or, Roughing It at Red Gulch.
35 Fred Fearnot's Open Hand; r. How He Helped a Friend. 36 Fred Fearnot in Debate; or, The Warmest Member of the House.	191 Fred Fearnot Stranded; or, How Terry Olcott Lost the Money. 192 Fred Fearnot in the Mountains; or, Held at Bay by Bandits.
137 Fred Fearnot's Great Plea; or, His Defence of the "Moneyless	193 Fred Fearnot's Terrible Risk; or, Terry Olcott's Reckless Venture.
Man." 138 Fred Fearnot at Princeton; or, The Battle of the Champions.	194 Fred Fearnot's Last Card; or, The Game That Saved His Life. 195 Fred Fearnot and the Professor; or, The Man Who Knew It All.
39 Fred Fearnot's Circus; or, High Old Time at New Era. 40 Fred Fearnot's Camp Hunt; or, The White Deer of the Adiron-	1196 Fred Fearnot's Big Scoop; or, Beating a Thousand Rivals.
dacks	1198 Fred Fearnot's Great Risk: or. One Chance in a Thousand.
41 Fred Fearnot and His Guide; or, The Mystery of the Mountain. 42 Fred Fearnot's County Fair; or, The Battle of the Fakirs.	199 Fred Fearnot as a Sleuth; or, Running Down a Slick Villain. 00 Fred Fearnot's New Deal; or, Working for a Bauker.
132 Fred Fearnot a Prisoner; or, Captured at Avon.	201 Fred Fearnot in Dakota; or, The Little Combination Ranche.
44 Fred Fearnot and the Senator; or, Breaking up a Scheme. 45 Fred Fearnot and the Baron; or, Calling Down a Nobleman.	202 Fred Fearnot and the Road Agents; or, Terry Olcott's Cool Nerve. 203 Fred Fearnot and the Amazon; or, The Wild Woman of the Plains.
is wear Fournot and the Brokers; or, Ten Days in Wall Street.	12. 4 Fred Fearnot's Training School or How to Make a Living.
47 Fred Fearnot's Little Scrap; or, The Fellow Who Wouldn't Stay	1846 Fred Kearnot and the Old Tranners or Searching for a Lost Cavern
Whipped. Whipped. Whipped. Fred Fearnot's Greatest Danger; or, Ten Days with the Moon-	The state of the s shiners.
For sale by all newsdealers, or sent postpaid on receipt of price, 5 cents per copy, by
FRANK TOUSEY. Publisher	24 Union Square, New York

YOU WANT ANY BACK NUMBERS

of our Libraries and cannot procure them from newsdealers, they can be obtained from this office direct. Cut out and fill in the following Order Blank and send it to us with the price of the books you want and we will send them to you by re-POSTAGE STAMPS TAKEN THE SAME AS MONEY. turn mail.

DEAR SIR-Enclosed find cents for which please send me:
copies of WORK AND WIN, Nos
" " PLUCK AND LUCK "
" " SECRET SERVICE "
" "THE LIBERTY BOYS OF '76, Nos
" " Ten-Cent Hand Books, Nos
Name	nState

SECRET SERVICE

OLD AND YOUNG KING BRADY, DETECTIVES.

PRICE 5 CTS. 32 PAGES. COLORED COVERS.

LATEST ISSUES:
3 The Bradys' Deep Deal; or, Hand-in-Glove with Crime.
4 The Bradys in a Snare; or, The Worst Case of All.
The Bradys Beyond Their Depth; or, The Great Swamp Mystery.
The Bradys' Hopeless Case; or, Against Plain Evidence.
The Bradys at the Helm; or, the Mystery of the River Steamer. The Bradys in Washington; or, Working for the President.
99 The Bradys Duped; or, The Cunning Work of Clever Crooks.
100 The Bradys in Maine; or, Solving the Great Camp Mystery.
101 The Bradys on the Great Lakes; or, Tracking the Canada Gang.
102 The Bradys in Montana; or, The Great Copper Mine Case.
103 The Bradys Hemmed In; or, Their Case in Arlzona.
04 The Bradys at Sea; or, A Hot Chase Over the Ocean.
105 The Girl from London; or, The Bradys After a Confidence Queen. 106 The Bradys Among the Chinamen; or, The Yellow Fiends of the Opium Joints.
107 The Bradys and the Pretty Shop Girl; or, The Grand Street Mystery.
The Bradys and the Gypsies; or, Chasing the Child Stealers.
109 The Bradys and the Wrong Man; or, The Story of a Strange Mistake.
10 The Pradys Petrayed; or, In the Hands of a Traitor.
111 The Bradys and Their Doubles; or, A Strange Tangle of Crime.
112 The Bradys in the Everglades; or, The Strange Case of a Summer Tourist.
113 The Bradys Defied; or, The Hardest Gang in New York.
114 The Bradys in High Life; or, The Great Society Mystery.
115 The Bradys Among Thieves; or, Hot Work in the Bowery.
116 The Bradys and the Sharpers; or, In Darkest New York.
117 The Bradys and the Bandits; or, Hunting for a Lost Boy.
118 The Bradys in Central Park; or, The Mystery of the Mail.
119 The Bradys on their Muscle; or, Shadowing the Red Hook Gang. 120 The Bradys' Opium Joint Case; or, Exposing the Chinese Crooks.
121 The Bradys' Girl Decoy; or, Rounding Up the East-Side Crooks.
122 The Bradys Under Fire; or, Tracking a Gang of Outlaws.
123 The Bradys at the Beach; or, The Mystery of the Bath House.
124 The Bradys and the Lost Gold Mine; or, Hot Work Among the Cowboys.
125 The Bradys and the Missing Girl; or, A Clew Found in the Dark.
126 The Bradys and the Banker; or, The Mystery of a Treasure Vault.
127 The Bradys and the Boy Acrobat; or, Tracing up a Theatrical Case.
128 The Bradys and Bad Man Smith; or, The Gang of Black Bar.
129 The Bradys and the Veiled Girl; or, Piping the Tombs Mystery. 130 The Bradys and the Deadshot Gang; or, Lively Work on the Frontier.
131 The Bradys with a Circus; or, On the Road with the Wild Beast
Tamers.
132 The Bradys in Wyoming; or, Tracking the Mountain Men.
133 The Bradys at Coney Island; or, Trapping the Sea-sideCrooks.
134 The Bradys and the Road Agents; or, The Great Deadwood Case. 135 The Bradys and the Bank Clerk; or, Tracing a Lost Money Package.
136 The Bradys on the Race Track; or, Beating the Sharpers.
137 The Bradys in the Chinese Quarter; or, The Queen of the Opium Flends.
138 The Bradys and the Counterfeiters; or, Wild Adventures in the Blue Ridge Mountains. 139 The Bradys in the Dens of New York; or, Working on the John Street Mystery.
40 The Bradys and the Rail Road Thieves; or, The Mystery of the Midnight Train.
11 The Bradys after the Pickpockets; or, Keen Work in the Shopping District.
142 The Bradys and the Broker; or. The Plot to Steal a Fortune. 143 The Bradys as Reporters; or, Working for a Newspaper.
44 The Bradys and the Lost Ranche; or, The Strange Case in Texas.
145 The Bradys and the Signal Boy; or, the Great Train Robbery.
46 The Bradys and Bunco Bill; or, The Cleverest Crook in New York.
47 The Bradys and the Female Detective; or, Leagued with the Customs Inspectors.
For sale by all newsdealers, or sent postna

1148 The Bradys and the Bank Mystery; or, The Search for a Stolen Million. 149 The Bradys at Cripple Creek; or, Knocking out the "Bad Men."
150 The Bradys and the Harbor Gang; or, Sharp Work after Dark.
151 The Bradys in Five Points; or, The Skeleton in the Cellar. 152 Fan Toy, the Opium Queen; or, The Bradys and the Chinese Smugglers. 153 The Bradys' Boy Pupil; or, Sifting Strange Evidence. 154 The Bradys in the Jaws of Death; or, Trapping the Wire Tap-155 The Bradys and the Typewriter; or, The Office Boy's Secret. 156 The Bradys and the Bandit King; or, Chasing the Mountain Thieves. 157 The Bradys and the Drug Slaves; or, The Yellow Demons of Chinatown. 158 The Bradys and the Anarchist Queen; or, Running Down the "Reds." 159 The Bradys and the Hotel Crooks; or, The Mystery of Room 44.
160 The Bradys and the Wharf Rats; or, Lively Work in the Har-161 The Bradys and the House of Mystery; or, A Dark Night's Work. 162 The Bradys' Winning Game; or, Playing Against the Gambiers. 163 The Bradys and the Mail Thieves; or, The Man in the Bag. 164 The Bradys and the Boatmen; or, The Clew Found in the River. 165 The Bradys after the Grafters; or, The Mystery in the Cab. 166 The Bradys and the Cross-Roads Gang; or, the Great Case in Missouri. 167 The Bradys and Miss Brown; or, The Mysterious Case in So-168 The Bradys and the Factory Girl; or, The Secret of the Poisoned Envelope. 169 The Bradys and Blonde Bill; or, The Diamond Thieves of Maiden Lane. 170 The Bradys and the Opium Ring; or, The Clew in Chinatown. 171 The Bradys on the Grand Circuit; or, Tracking the Light-Harness Gang. 172 The Bradys and the Black Doctor; or, The Secret of the Old Vault. 173 The Bradys and the Girl in Grey; or, The Queen of the Crooks. 174 The Bradys and the Juggler; or, Out with a Variety Show. 175 The Bradys and the Moonshiners; or, Away Down in Tennessee. 176 The Bradys in Badtown; or, The Fight for a Gold Mine. 177 The Bradys in the Klondike; or, Ferreting Out the Gold Thieves. 178 The Bradys on the East Side; or, Crooked Work in the Slums. 179 The Bradys and the "Highbinders"; or, The Hot Case in Chinatown. 180 The Bradys and the Serpent Ring; or, The Strange Case of the Fortune-Teller. 181 The Bradys and "Silent Sam"; or, Tracking the Deaf and Dumb 182 The Bradys and the "Bonanza" King; or, Fighting the Fakirs in Frisco. 183 The Bradys and the Boston Banker; or, Hustling for Millions in the Hub. 184 The Bradys on Blizzard Island; or, Tracking the Gold Thieves of Cape Nome. 185 The Bradys in the Black Hills; or, Their Case in North Dakota. 186 The Bradys and "Faro Frank"; or, a Hot Case in the Gold Mines. 187 The Bradys and the "Rube": or, Tracking the Confidence Men. 188 The Bradys as Firemen; or, Tracking a Gang of Incendiaries.
189 The Bradys in the Oil Country; or, The Mystery of the Giant Gusher.
190 The Bradys and the Blind Beggar; or, The Worst Crook of all.
191 The Bradys and the Bank Breakers; or, Working the Thugs of Chicago.
192 The Bradys and the Seven Skulls; or, The Clew That Was Found in the Barn. 193 The Bradys in Mexico; or, The Search for the Aztec Treasure House. 194 The Bradys at Black Run; or, Trailing the Coiners of Candle Creek. 195 The Bradys Among the Bulls and Bears; or, Working the Wires in Wall Street. 196 The Bradys and the King; or, Working for the Bank of England. 197 The Bradys and the Duke's Diamonds; or, The Mystery of the Yacht.
198 The Bradys and the Bed Rock Mystery; or, Working in the Black Hills. 24 Union Square, New York.

postpaid on receipt of price, 5 cents per copy, by FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher,

WANT BACOK CHANGE DIRECT ANY

of our Libraries and cannot procure them from newsdealers, they can be obtained from this office direct. Cut out and fill in the following Order Blank and send it to us with the price of the books you want and we will send them to you by return mail. STAMPS TAKEN THE SAME AS MONEY. POSTAGE

FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher, 24 Union Square, New York.
DEAR SIR-Enclosed find cents for which please send me:
copies of WORK AND WIN, Nos
" " PLUCK AND LUCK "
" "SECRET SERVICE "
" "THE LIBERTY BOYS OF '76, Nos
" "Ten-Cent Hand Books, Nos
Name

THE STAGE.

No. 41. THE BOYS OF NEW YORK END MEN'S JOKE BOOK .- Containing a great variety of the latest jokes used by the most famous end men. No amateur minstrels is complete without this wonderful little book.

No. 42. THE BOYS OF NEW YORK STUMP SPEAKER .-Containing a varied assortment of stump speeches, Negro, Dutch and Irish. Also end men's jokes. Just the thing for home amusement and amateur shows.

No. 45. THE BOYS OF NEW YORK MINSTREL GUIDE AND JOKE BOOK. -- Something new and very instructive. Every boy should obtain this book, as it contains full instructions for organizing an amateur minstrel troupe. No. 65. MULDOON'S JOKES, -This is one of the most original joke books ever published, and it is brimful of wit and humor. It contains a large collection of songs, jokes, conundrums, etc., of Terrence Muldoon, the great wit, humorist, and practical joker of the day. Every boy who can enjoy a good substantial joke should obtain a copy immediately.

No. 79. HOW TO BECOME AN ACTOR .- Containing complete instructions how to make up for various characters on the stage; together with the duties of the Stage Manager, Prompter, Scenic Artist and Property Man. By a prominent Stage Manager.

No. 80. GUS WILLIAMS' JOKE BOOK .- Containing the latest jokes, anecdotes and funny stories of this world-renowned and ever popular German comedian. Sixty-four pages; handsome colored cover containing a half-tone photo of the author.

HOUSEKEEPING.

No. 16. HOW TO KEEP A WINDOW GARDEN .- Containing full instructions for constructing a window garden either in town or country, and the most approved methods for raising beautiful flowers at home. The most complete book of the kind ever published.

No. 30. HOW TO COOK .- One of the most instructive books on cooking ever published. It contains recipes for cooking meats, fish, game, and oysters; also pies, puddings, cakes and all kinds of pastry, and a grand collection of recipes by one of our most popular cooks.

No. 37. HOW TO KEEP HOUSE .- It contains information for everybody, boys, girls, men and women; it will teach you how to make almost anything around the house, such as parlor ornaments, brackets, cements, Aeolian harps, and bird lime for catching birds.

ELECTRICAL.

No. 46. HOW TO MAKE AND USE ELECTRICITY.—A description of the wonderful uses of electricity and electro magnetism: together with full instructions for making Electric Toys, Batteries, etc. By George Trebel, A. M., M. D. Containing over fifty illustrations.

No. 64. HOW TO MAKE ELECTRICAL MACHINES .-- Containing full directions for making electrical machines, induction coils, dynamos, and many novel toys to be worked by electricity.

By R. A. R. Bennett. Fully illustrated.

No. 67. HOW TO DO ELECTRICAL TRICKS.—Containing a large collection of instructive and highly amusing electrical tricks, together with illustrations. By A. Anderson.

ENTERTAINMENT.

No. 9. HOW TO BECOME A VENTRILOQUIST.—By Harry Kennedy. The secret given away. Every intelligent boy reading this book of instructions, by a practical professor (delighting multitudes every night with his wonderful imitations), can master the art, and create any amount of fun for himself and friends. It is the greatest book ever published, and there's millions (of fun) in it.

No. 20. HOW TO ENTERTAIN AN EVENING PARTY .- A very valuable little book just published. A complete compendium of games, sports, card diversions, comic recitations, etc., suitable it one of the most complete and handy books published for parlor or drawing-room entertainment. It contains more for the money than any book published.

No. 35. HOW TO PLAY GAMES .- A complete and useful little book, containing the rules and regulations of billiards, bagatelle, backgammon, croquet, dominoes, etc.

No. 36. HOW TO SOLVE CONUNDRUMS .- Containing all the leading conundrums of the day, amusing riddles, curious catches and witty sayings.

No. 52. HOW TO PLAY CARDS .- A complete and handy little book, giving the rules and full directions for playing Euchre, Crib-Auction Pitch. All Fours, and many other popular games of cards. No. 66. HOW TO DO PUZZLES .- Containing over three hundred interesting puzzles and conundrums, with key to same. A complete book. Fully illustrated. By A. Anderson.

ETIQUETTE.

No. 13. HOW TO DO IT; OR, BOOK OF ETIQUETTE.-It! all about. There's happiness in it.

No. 33. HOW TO BEHAVE.—Containing the rules and etiquette of good society and the easiest and most approved methods of ap- know to be a Cadet. Compiled and written by Lu Senarens, author pearing to good advantage at parties, balls, the theatre, church, and of "How to Become a Naval Cadet." in the drawing-room.

DECLAMATION.

with many standard readings.

No. 31. HOW TO BECOME A SPEAKER.—Containing fourteen illustrations, giving the different positions requisite to become a good speaker, reader and elocutionist. Also containing gems from all the popular authors of prose and poetry, arranged in the most simple and concise manner possible.

No. 49. HOW TO DEBATE.—Giving rules for conducting debates, outlines for debates, questions for discussion, and the best sources for procuring information on the questions given.

SOCIETY.

No. 3. HOW TO FLIRT .- The arts and wiles of flirtation are fully explained by this little book. Besides the various methods of handkerchief, fan. glove, parasol, window and hat flirtation, it contains a full list of the language and sentiment of flowers, which is interesting to everybody, both old and young. You cannot be happy without one.

No. 4. HOW TO DANCE is the title of a new and handsome little book just issued by Frank Tousey. It contains full instructions in the art of dancing, etiquette in the ball-room and at parties. how to dress, and full directions for calling off in all popular square dances.

No. 5. HOW TO MAKE LOVE .- A complete guide to love, Courtship and marriage, giving sensible advice, rules and etiquette to be observed, with many curious and interesting things not generally known.

No. 17. HOW TO DRESS.—Containing full instruction in the art of dressing and appearing well at home and abroad, giving the selections of colors, material, and how to have them made up.

No. 18. HOW TO BECOME BEAUTIFUL.-One of the brightest and most valuable little books ever given to the world. Everybody wishes to know how to become beautiful, both male and female. The secret is simple, and almost costless. Read this book and be convinced how to become beautiful.

BIRDS AND ANIMALS.

No. 7. HOW TO KEEP BIRDS .- Handsomely illustrated and containing full instructions for the management and training of the canary, mockingbird, bobolink, blackbird, paroquet, parrot, etc.

No. 39. HOW TO RAISE DOGS, POULTRY, PIGEONS AND RABBITS .- A useful and instructive book. Handsomely illustrated. By Ira Drofraw.

No. 40. HOW TO MAKE AND SET TRAPS.-Including hints on how to catch moles, weasels, otter, rats, squirrels and birds. Also how to cure skins. Copiously illustrated. By J. Harrington Keene.

No. 50, HOW TO STUFF BIRDS AND ANIMALS .- A valuable book, giving instructions in collecting, preparing, mounting and preserving birds, animals and insects.

No. 54. HOW TO KEEP AND MANAGE PETS .- Giving complete information as to the manner and method of raising, keeping, taming, breeding, and managing all kinds of pets; also giving full instructions for making cages, etc. Fully explained by twenty-eight illustrations, making it the most complete book of the kind ever published.

MISCELLANEOUS.

No. 8. HOW TO BECOME A SCIENTIST.—A useful and instructive book, giving a complete treatise on chemistry; also experiments in acoustics, mechanics, mathematics, chemistry, and directions for making fireworks, colored fires, and gas balloons. This book cannot be equaled.

No. 14. HOW TO MAKE CANDY .-- A complete hand-book for making all kinds of candy, ice-cream, syrups, essences, etc., etc.

No. 19.—FRANK TOUSEY'S UNITED STATES DISTANCE TABLES, POCKET COMPANION AND GUIDE.-Giving the official distances on all the railroads of the United States and Canada. Also table of distances by water to foreign ports, back fares in the principal cities, reports of the census, etc., etc., making

No. 38. HOW TO BECOME YOUR OWN DOCTOR .- A wonderful book, containing useful and practical information in the treatment of ordinary diseases and ailments common to every family. Abounding in useful and effective recipes for general complaints.

No. 55. HOW TO COLLECT STAMPS AND COINS .- Containing valuable information regarding the collecting and arranging of stamps and coins. Handsomely illustrated.

No. 58. HOW TO BE A DETECTIVE.—By Old King Brady, the world-known detective. In which he lays down some valuable bage. Casino, Forty-Five, Rouxce, Pedro Sancho, Draw Poker, and sensible rules for beginners, and also relates some adventures and experiences of well-known detectives.

No. 60. HOW TO BECOME A PHOTOGRAPHER.—Containing useful information regarding the Camera and how to work it; also how to make Photographic Magic Lantern Slides and other Transparencies. Handsomely illustrated. By Captain W. De W. Abney.

No. 62. HOW TO BECOME A WEST POINT MILITARY is a great life secret, and one that every young man desires to know | CADET .- Containing full explanations how to gain admittance, course of Study, Examinations, Duties, Staff of Officers, Post Guard. Police Regulations. Fire Department, and all a boy should

No. 63. HOW TO BECOME A NAVAL CADET.—Complete instructions of how to gain admission to the Annapolis Naval Academy. Also containing the course of instruction, description No. 27. HOW TO RECITE AND BOOK OF RECITATIONS. of grounds and buildings, historical sketch, and everything a boy -Containing the most popular selections in use, comprising Dutch | should know to become an officer in the United States Navy. Comdialect. French dialect, Yankee and Irish dialect pieces, together piled and written by Lu Senarens, author of "How to Become a West Point Military Cadet."

PRICE 10 CENTS EACH, OR 3 FOR 25 CENTS. Address FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher, 24 Union Square, New York.

A SPLENDID NEW ONE

Frank Reade Weekly

CONTAINING STORIES OF ADVENTURE

ON LAND—UNDER THE SEA—IN THE AIR.

BT "INOINAIME," THE PRINCE OF STORY WRITERS.

Each Number in a Handsomely Illuminated Cover.

A 32-PAGE BOOK FOR 5 CENTS.

All our readers know Frank Reade, Jr., the greatest inventor of the age, and his two fun-loving chums, Barney and Pomp. The stories to be published in this magazine will contain a true account of the wonderful and exciting adventures of the famous inventor, with his marvellous flying machines, electrical overland engines, and his extraordinary submarine boats. Each number will be a rare treat. Tell your newsdealer to get you a copy. Here are the first four titles, and each number will be better than the previous one:

- No. 1. FRANK READE, JR.'S WHITE CRUISER OF THE CLOUDS; or, The Search for the Dog-Faced Men.
- No. 2. FRANK READE, JR.'S SUBMARINE BOAT, THE "EXPLORER"; or, To the North Pole Under the Ice.
- NO. 3. FRANK READE, JR.'S ELECTRIC VAN; or, Hunting Wild Animals in the Jungles of India.
- No. 4. FRANK READE, JR.'S ELECTRIC AIR CANOE; or, The Search for the Valley of Diamonds.

 Issued November 21

For Sale by All Newsdealers, or will be Sent to Any Address on Receipt of Price, 5 Cents per Copy, by

FRANK TOUSEY, Publisher,

24 Union Square, New York.

IF YOU WANT ANY BACK NUMBERS

of our Libraries and cannot procure them from newsdealers, they can be obtained from this office direct. Cut out and fill in the following Order Blank and send it to us with the price of the books you want and we will send them to you by re-POSTAGE STAMPS TAKEN THE SAME AS MONEY. turn mail.

DEAR SIR-Enclosed find cents for which please send me:copies of WORK AND WIN, Nos....... " SECRET SERVICE, Nos...... " " THE LIBERTY BOYS OF '76, Nos...... " Ten-Cent Hand Books, Nos....... Name...... Street and No....... Town..... State..... State.....